Wholesale price rise near record

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices boomed upward in January at the second highest monthly rate on record as the inflationary spiral stretched across the entire economy, the government said today.

Sharply higher wholesale costs for farm products, industrial commodities, consumer finished goods and fuels pushed the wholesale price index up by a seasonally adjusted 3.1 per cent, a rise exceeded only by the record 6.2 per cent of last August.

If January's rate is computed on an annual basis, it comes out to an annual rate of inflation of 37.2 per cent —3.1 per cent a month for 12 months.

Wholesale prices, accelerating in the past few months, have risen at an annual rate of 32.3 per cent in the past three months, a record. In the past 12 months, they have gone up 20.8 per cent, the second highest rise for any 12-month period since October 1947.

Wholesale price rises mean that the higher costs will be translated into higher retail prices in the weeks ahead, as inflation shows no letup for the consumer.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics said wholesale prices in January actually rose at a monthly rate of 3.5 per cent when usual seasonal influences are subtracted.

Prices of farm products and processed foods and feeds jumped 5.1 per cent on a seasonally adjusted basis; industrial commodities 2.3 per cent and consumer finished goods 2.8 per cent. All three figures reflected an economy caught in a tremendous inflationary grip.

A month earlier, wholesale prices went up 2.2 per cent.

The Nixon administration has offered consumers hope that the price surge will let up in the second half of this year.

The bureau said the wholesale cost of fuel accounted for almost 40 per cent of the jump in industrial commodities prices, with refined petroleum products leaping by 7.7 per cent and crude oil 22 per cent.

But fuels were not the only commodities rising sharply. Nonferrous metals were up sharply. So were prices for chemicals, paper products and machinery.

Of farm products, livestock prices jumped 15.4 per cent, milk 4.2 per cent, eggs 3.8 per cent, grains 8.9 per cent and fresh fruits and vegetables 7.5 per cent.

In wholesale processed foods, prices of meats, poultry and fish were up 7.8 per cent, dairy products 2 per cent and processed fruits and vegetables 1.1 per cent.

Wholesale prices of motor vehicles and equipment climbed 1.2 per cent as did prices of railroad equipment. The bureau also said other products caught up in the inflationary spiral included household and commercial furniture; appliances; floor coverings; metal household containers; dinnerware; tires and tubes; crude natural rubber; plastic film; shoes; leather goods, and toys and children's vehicles.

The only industrial commodity group showing a decline in price was lumber and wood products, reflecting drops in the prices of softwood plywood and softwood lumber.

The only farm product showing a decline was live poultry, which dropped nine tenths of one per cent.

The bureau said that the price index climbed last month to 150.4 of the 1967 average, meaning that on the whole it cost $15.04 to buy the same volume of wholesale goods that cost $10 in 1967.

No rationing for now, Lucey says

MADISON, Wis. (AP) —Gov. Patrick Lucey restated Thursday that he felt gasoline rationing, even on a voluntary basis, would not be needed in Wisconsin for the time being.

Lucey retained the view he expressed last week despite a cut in Wisconsin's gasoline allocation for this month from 87.2 per cent of its Feburary, 1972, consumption to 85.2 per cent.

"I don't think the present situation justifies rationing," he said. "Any kind of rationing tends to distort...the operation of a free market. No matter how well you design it, there still are built-in inequities.

The governor commented after meeting with state energy coordinator Stanley York following a visit to Washington by York to discuss the situation with federal officials.

Lucey said federal officals used figures to determine this month's gasoline that state tax records indicate were two million gallons short of the state's actual demand for gasoline.

The chief executive said Wisconsin will have to accept the lower allotment this month, but federal officials promise to be more careful in determining the state's fuel quotas in the future.

York said federal officials were not able to fully explain how they decided to cut Wisconsin's allocation.

The energy coordinator said one petroleum company has informed him it already has diverted 53,000 gallons of gasoline which had been destined for Wisconsin to states where quotas were expanded.

Although the situation in Wisconsin will be "very tight" this month, York said, it will still be better than many other states.

Overnight stay

Mrs. Richard Nixon and David Eisenhower arrive at University Hospital in Indianapolis Thursday to see Julie Nixon Eisenhower, who was recovering from an emergency operation. A White House spokesman said the President's daughter was having post-operative discomfort and pain but her condition was considered satisfactory. She is expected to be in the hospital seven to ten days. (AP Wirephoto)

Julie improving following surgery

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (AP) — Julie Nixon Eisenhower was in satisfactory condition today after undergoing surgery Thursday for removal of a benign ovarian cyst, her White House doctor said.

Dr. William Lukash gave the report after an early morning visit with the President's 25-year-old daughter at Indiana University Medical Center here. He came here with First Lady Pat Nixon from Key Biscayne, where they were with the President.

Mrs. Eisenhower was in surgery for 41 minutes Thursday night while two of the state's leading gynecologists stopped internal bleeding and removed the cyst.

Mrs. Eisenhower is recovering in the powder-blue carpeted sixth floor executive suite. Mrs. Nixon and Julie's husband, David Eisenhower, are also staying at the hospital.

Reached in Washington, Mrs. Nixon's press secretary, Helen Smith, said Julie was "in satisfactory condition" and had been seen by the two specialists who performed the operation.

"She did experience some pain and nausea during the night, but that was normal," Mrs. Smith reported.

She said, "All vital signs are within normal range."

Mrs. Eisenhower sat up in a chair for a brief period during the night, Mrs. Smith said, and was visited by both Mrs. Nixon and her husband during periods when she was awake.

Mrs. Eisenhower had a liquid breakfast and expressed a desire to eat, which Mrs. Smith said was "a good sign."

Her mother and husband had rushed by separate military jet planes to be at her side shortly after the operation.

Mrs. Eisenhower had come to Indianapolis for an editorial meeting of the Saturday Evening Post, where she is a $10,000-a-year assistant editor.

Dr. Cory SerVaas, wife of Curtis Publishing Co. board chairman Beurt SerVaas, said Mrs. Eisenhower became ill during the meeting and was taken to their home in the northwest Indianapolis suburbs.

"Julie complained of pain in her lower back," Dr. SerVaas said. "She spent a restless night at our house and by Thursday noon she was in extreme pain."

Dr. SerVaas took Julie to Dr. Sprague Gardiner, one of the state's leading gynecologists, who found substantial internal bleeding and had Mrs. Eisenhower admitted to Krannert Pavillion of the university's medical center.

"At first we thought it was an ectopic pregnancy," Dr. SerVaas said. "But we found she had a benign ovarian cyst.

"The cyst was removed and the bleeding was stopped. Everything went well."

Dr. SerVaas added the operation should not affect Julie's ability to bear children.

Both Dr. SerVaas and hospital spokesman Harrison Ullmann emphasized there was no tubular pregnancy, as some reports had stated.

2 of U.N. force killed at Suez

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) —Two Finnish soldiers with the United Nations peacekeeping force were killed and seven others were wounded by mines in an unmarked minefield in the U.N. buffer zone west of the Suez Canal, the Finnish Embassy reported today.

The embassy said four of the wounded were in serious condition.

It reported:

A Finnish captain was slightly injured Thursday afternoon when he detonated an antipersonnel mine in the field. A group of Finnish soldiers rushed to his rescue, and their vehicle hit an antitank mine, killing two of the men and injuring six others.

An embassy spokesman said he did not know whether the mines had been laid by the Egyptians or the Israelis. But reports of the incident in Israeli newspapers said the minefield was Egyptian.

Meanwhile, Damascus Radio reported that Syrian and Israeli tanks and artillery dueled for nearly two hours on the Golan Heights today after a clash in which four Israeli soldiers were killed.

There was no comment from the Israeli military command.

The official Syrian radio also reported the return of President Hafez Assad from Algiers and said his meeting there with three other Arab chiefs of state upheld the two principles endorsed at the Arab summit last November: complete Israeli withdrawal from Arab territory and guaranteeing the rights of the Palestinians "to their territory and homeland."

The two principles were mentioned in the communique issued in Algiers Thursday by Assad, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, King Faisal of Saudi Arabia and Algerian President Houari Boumedienne. But the emphasis put on them by Damascus Radio appeared to be a reminder of the Syrian regime's previous statements that it will not agree to a disengagement agreement with Israel unless Israel agrees to withdraw from all lands captured in the 1967 and 1973 wars.

Cardinal robbed

CHICAGO (AP) —John Cardinal Cody of Chicago and another man believed to be his chauffeur have been robbed of $233 at gunpoint on a Near North Side street, police report.

The crime took place Thursday night as the two men were walking from Holy Name Cathedral to an auto, officials said.

Neither man was hurt.

Police said Cardinal Cody, 66, had asked that no information be released about the crime, but when pressed by reporters officers provided some details of the incident.

The robbers reportedly took $200 from the cardinal and $33 from the other man, but did not take the cardinal's ring or pectoral cross, both symbols of his position.

Two persons reportedly picked up by police were released after the cardinal failed to identify them as the robbers, officers said.

Of the cardinal's request that the police report of the incident not be made public, Deputy Police Supt. Walter Vallee said, "If the victim wants to remain anonymous, we will do it. With unusual people, we acknowledge unusual requests."

Protection for Agnew defended by Treasury

WASHINGTON (AP) —The Treasury Department has refused to lift its Secret Service protection of former Vice President Spiro T. Agnew, calling such protection "neither unprecedented nor unreasonable."

The department made its position clear in a letter to Rep. John E. Moss, D-Calif., who had asked that the protection be terminated.

However, top Treasury lawyers pointed out that Secret Service protection was previously given to public officials outside the executive branch.

The letter said such protection had been given Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., during the 1972 presidential campaign even though he was not a candidate, and that Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., had an escort for six months following expiration of his term as vice president.

"It is Treasury's position that we are carrying out a presidential order which is neither unprecedented nor unreasonable," said Edward C. Schumlts, general counsel for the department.

Moss had demanded an end to the protection, citing an opinion from the General Accounting Office that "the presidential directive to the Secret Service request on such protection does not constitute legal authority to provide it."

However, the Treasury said, "the statutes are silent on affording Secret Service protection for former vice presidents of the United States."

Agnew resigned his office last October 10 after entering a plea of no contest to a charge of income tax evasion.

The GAO, which is an arm of Congress, has reported that Agnew's protection cost nearly $90,000 from the date of his resignation through Dec. 15.

Agnew is currently on an extended stay in California, accompanied, according to Moss, by from 12 to 21 agents.

Treasury sources say threats against Agnew were received immediately following his resignation but that there have been no threats for some time.

The sources say, however, that Secret Service protection for Agnew probably will be withdrawn sometime in April.

Republican Sen. George D. Aiken of Vermont, after 33 years of service, announced Thursday that he will not seek re-election this year. Aiken, 81, said in Washington, "my decision not to be a candidate for another term was made some years ago."

Jaworski moving to confrontation

WASHINGTON (AP) — With a strongly worded letter to the chairman of the Senate Judiciary committee, special Watergate prosecutor Leon Jaworski has moved toward a confrontation with President Nixon.

"It is now clear that evidence I deem material to our investigations will not be forthcoming," Jaworski said in a letter Thursday to Sen. James O. Eastland, D-Miss. The White House said the President himself made the decision to end cooperation with the investigations.

Jaworski disclosed that the material the President had refused to supply included the tapes of 27 presidential meetings and telephone calls related to the investigation of the Watergate break-in and cover-up. That number was far higher than had ever been indicated by the prosecutor's office.

Jaworski said that in rejecting his requests, the White House had given no indication "any requested recording is either irrelevant to our inquiries or subject to some particularized privilege."

Eastland was in Mississippi and had no immediate comment on the letter.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., a judiciary committee member, said he would request an early meeting of the panel "to consider the ominous implications of Mr. Jaworski's letter."

Deputy White House Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren told newsmen at Key Biscayne, Fla., that the President had decided Jaworski already had received sufficient material "to allow the grand juries to proceed with their work without further delay."

Asked if the President was considering firing Jaworski, Warren said the question "is not before us; the situation hasn't been raised."

It was after a confrontation over access to White House tapes that Nixon fired former special prosecutor Archibald Cox last October 20.

Jaworski succeeded Cox. In testimony before the Senate Judiciary Committee, Jaworski said he had assurances of cooperation from the White House and would report any breakdown to the committee.

Vice President Gerald R. Ford said Jaworski's letter indicates "that the White House has cooperated sufficiently for him to carry out his duties."

Jaworski's letter said that while he has sufficient evidence for criminal indictments, "the (requested) material is important to a complete and thorough investigation and may contain evidence necessary for any future trials."

Ford said, "I don't think the doors of the White House should be open for every piece of paper the committee wants. Those doors should not be open to any fishing expedition."

Meanwhile, the President's Watergate counsel, James D. St. Clair, was engaged in negotiations with the House Judiciary committee over access to White House files for the committee's impeachment inquiry.

John Doar, chief counsel for the House inquiry, and Albert Jenner, minority counsel for the probe, told newsmen Thursday that St. Clair wanted assurances that confidentiality of White House files would be protected.

Friends give account of Solzhenitsyn's trip into exile

BASEL, Switzerland (AP) —Alexander Solzhenitsyn arrived in Basel by train today en route to Zurich. He was accompanied by his Swiss lawyer and a woman interpreter.

The Russian Nobel Prize winner, who was kicked out of the Soviet Union for his latest book about Stalinist labor camps, had spent two nights in the rural West German village of Langenbroich.

Awaiting the exiled Soviet writer in the Swiss financial center were the large fortune his books have accumulated for him in the West and the voluminous records of lawyer Fritz Heeb's dealings on Solzhenitsyn's behalf with publishers in Europe and America for the past five years.

It was not known how long Solzhenitsyn planned to stay in Switzerland. But Heeb indicated earlier that he would probably settle in Scandinavia.

The Paris newspaper France-Soir estimated that the writer has amassed at least $6 million in royalties from the publication of his books outside the Soviet bloc.

Heeb has said that Solzhenitsyn told him two years ago that he wanted his royalties used for humanitarian purposes inside the Soviet Union. But that was in the days when the writer thought Soviet law protected him from expulsion and that he would live out his life in Russia.

Solzhenitsyn talked by telephone with his wife in Moscow after he arrived in West Germany Wednesday, and they had another conversation for 25 minutes Thursday night, friends said. But his host in West Germany, novelist Heinrich Boll, told newsmen today Mrs. Solzhenitsyn would remain in Moscow until her husband finds a permanent home.

"She does not want to travel to and fro between hotels with three children," Boll said.

Tass, the official Soviet news agency, reported after Solzhenitsyn was expelled from the Soviet Union Wednesday that his family could join him "when they deem it necessary."

The family includes the couple's three sons, Mrs. Solzhenitsyn's 11-year-old son by a previous marriage, and her widowed mother. Friends of the family thought the Soviet government would let all of them leave.

Boll said Solzhenitsyn spent most of Thursday conferring with his attorney at Boll's country home in Langenbroich and now wants to decide in Zurich on his future moves and where he will eventually settle.

"He wants to gain clarity about his entire situation," Boll said. "During his two days in Langenbroich, he used the time to recover physically and relax psychologically while making his first direct contacts in the West.

"He had to collect himself first.... He has a good sense of humor. He is lively and very vital."

The bearded Russian author refused again Thursday to grant interviews to newsmen, telling them: "No interviews,

'Hottest selling' item usually phony

(Last of five columns)

"Make big profits! Become an authorized distributor. Sell Special Formula gasoline additive —the hottest selling item in the automotive direct selling field. Manufacturer endorsed.

"Guaranteed free luxury motor car if appointed state franchise director . . . Free samples available. Send !10.35 . . .

"Good only for orders received in next 10 days. Bigger discounts if order rushed."

Then appears a table showing that your cost for six units is $24.50, on which you make a profit of $7. But if you buy three dozen units at a cost of $92.50, you make a profit of $90.

There are telltale signs

This is a composite ad, prepared for me by the president of the Better Business Bureau of Metropolitan New York, Woodrow Wirsig, to illustrate a fraud in distributorships sold by mail. The telltale signs, as exemplified by the ad are:

(1) "Creative" accounting. That table is very clever, for who's going to buy $24.50 of goods to make a $7 profit when he can make approximately 100 per cent if he goes up to $92.50?

(2) Exaggerations. A free luxury motor car if one sells enough cans of gasoline additive? Even a cockeyed optimist should have trouble believing that one. Manufacturer endorsed? Who? The hottest selling item in the field of automotive direct selling? Hardly . . .

(3) Pregsure. The implication is that you must act at once or you're barred. The offer will last for only 10 days. The pressure is intensified in follow-up letters to the sucker.

(4) Duplicity. There are "free samples" offered to the skeptical—but the "free" samples cost $10.35.

(5) Ease of operation. This is not in the composite ad above but it is in the letter the potential investor receives, assuring him that "you don't have to be a salesman in order to rake in those profits. Those unique formulas, together with the endorsement from the luxury motor car, practically sell themselves."

The claims are all phony

Here's what's wrong with this operation:

The earnings claims are phony. There is simply not this kind of money to be made through the sale of this sort of product.

Despite a promise to the contrary, the company could not make good on a money refund guarantee to the investor (in this case, if he returned the product within 30 days).

As for the manufacturer's endorsement touted in the promotional ad and literature, that was completely fictitious. In one instance, the manufacturer told the BBB that it was contemplating legal action against the promoters.

How do you avoid being taken by this business opportunities swindle—as in others you've read this week?

Verify the claims for the product. If it's a gasoline additive, talk to auto dealers. Check out the endorsements from manufacturers referred to in the literature. Ask the company representative for the name of a person at the manufacturer's office to whom you can talk and with whom you can discuss your doubts. Do not permit yourself to be turned away.

Ask the promoter for names and addresses of other distributors. Contact them to find out how much money they have made selling these products under average market conditions.

Find out how many of these distributors have been in operation for more than a year. A year should be long enough to determine whether or not the business can be a success.

Talk with your lawyer, banker

Discuss the investment and operation of the business with your own family, your lawyer, your local banker.

Do not ever forget that a written guarantee is only as good as the company behind it. If the company offering a "full refund" isn't in business, the offer is worthless.

And above all, heed Wirsig's warning that this spring of climbing unemployment and sluggish business will bring out the "business opportunities" swindlers as never before. Be on the alert for their lures—via every means of communication.

Be on guard for yourself—for it is just when you're badly hurt by loss of a job or difficulty in getting work that you're most vulnerable to the gypsters. Use your head. Take advantage of the services the Better Business Bureaus want to offer you. Ask for guidance. Be aware of your own weaknesses.

From this service you can carry away the guides to protect you from all other variations of business opportunities rackets. The promotions themselves will come and go, as Monday's column reported, but the promoters will remain the same.

The NEW BOWL- -RAMA Is Coming!

Colson imprint seen in Nixon strike views

WASHINGTON—President Nixon's wholesale adoption of the Teamsters union position in his hard line against the strike of independent truckers, a policy showing the enduring imprint of Charles W. Colson, threatened disastrous economic consequences which were only narrowly averted last week.

Ex-presidential aide Colson, whose biggest client in private practice is the Teamsters union, maintains deep backstage influence at the Labor Department. Hence, Chuck Colson's fine hand was obvious in Secretary of Labor Peter Brennan's blast at striking truckers which nearly collapsed the fragile negotiations.

Union has supported Nixon

But beyond Brennan, Mr. Nixon himself, in dealing with a grave national emergency, maintained inflexible allegiance to the one big union still supporting him. Following the Teamsters line, Mr. Nixon avoided negotiations with the independents, endangered the talks once they began and then failed to help sell the settlement to skeptical truckers. Nothing could better demonstrate Nixon-Colson hard-line politics and its inappropriateness for a President with 27 per cent national approval handling an emergency.

From the moment independent truck operators began protesting the shortage and high cost of diesel fuel, Teamsters international president Frank Fitzsimmons viewed the problem as a jurisdictional dispute. With some reason, he saw a strike organized by the 250,000 owner-operators as a threat to his union's supremacy in the industry.

That view was shared in the Labor Department, where agents of Teamsters counsel Colson abound and whose secretary, Brennan, was handpicked by Colson from the Nixonite construction unions. So, the White House rejected any formal government contact with the independents, preparing instead for the Pentagon to forcibly take over moving vital freight. That seemed more congenial to Mr. Nixon anyway.

It will never be known whether Mr. Nixon would ever have put government officials in contact with the truckers had Gov. Milton Shapp of Pennsylvania not barged into Washington. Although administration officials grumble that Democrat Shapp has grossly enlarged his role in the successful negotiations, there is no doubt the governor wisely forced the White House to talk to the truckers.

Statement commended Teamsters

Still, with Fitzsimmons blasting "government officials" —obviously Shapp—who "kowtow" to violence-prone strikers, the Nixon administration wanted to stay arm's length from the independents. That became clear Feb. 5 when federal energy czar William Simon prepared to publicly disclose the government's proposals (in a statement which gratuitously commended the Teamsters, not even involved in the strike).

Shapp objected vigorously that issuing public statements was no way to bargain. However, if disclosure had to be made, he urged that Simon's statement commend the independents as well as the Teamsters. So, the following addition to Simon's statement was pencilled in: We also want to recognize the constructive efforts of Mr. William Hill (chairman of the Steel Haulers Assn. and a key leader of the independents).

Whether Simon actually agreed to add this commendation is in dispute, but it definitely was omitted from the version he delivered over television. The essentially irrelevant praise of Fitzsimmons for aiding "our understanding of the problem" in a January meeting was conspicuously retained.

The next day, Feb. 6, brought much worse. Brennan, reflecting both the Teamsters and White House lines, attacked "a few dissident owner-operators" as causing "this needless trucking halt" just as their leaders were negotiating with government officials. Shapp was outraged; federal negotiators were privately bitter that a second, more strident government voice had sounded; the negotiations were nearly undermined.

Even after a compromise was reached, individual truckers expressed doubt the government would fulfill it. Mr. Nixon gave no help. While leaders of the independents were trying to halt the shutdown, the President broke his silence on the emergency with words that could only undermine those efforts.

Nixon denounces violence

In his transportation speech over radio Feb. 9, Mr. Nixon added a few paragraphs—not trying to coax independent truckers back to work, but vowing that "in no instance will we tolerate violence from those with grievances" and promising "no sympathy" for lawbreakers. He mentioned neither Shapp nor independent truckers organizations but praised Fitzsimmons and the Teamsters "for their responsible actions during this period." "

Indeed, the strike which nearly paralyzed the nation was not that bad, according to the President. "At least 80 per cent of the nation's truckers, to their very great credit, stayed on the job," he claimed. In fact, the independents comprise closer to 30 per cent. But thanks to violence and intimidation, the strike was nearly totally effective for all interstate drivers, with members of the Teamsters union as well as independents pulling their rigs off the road. Not all the Colson-Nixon rhetoric can erase the truth of that.

A RECORD OF PRESCEIPTION TAX EXEMPTIONS for you for tax purposes is now ready at Belling's Pharmacy, 204 E. College Avenue, shown above. Everytime a prescription is filled for you at Belling's, complete information is listed in the drug store's family health record file. This information includes the prescription, doctor, name of medication, date, and price. At year's end, the amount spent on medicines is mailed to the buyer for income tax purposes. This added service is given to Belling's customers without charge. "Your health is our business" has been the motto of Belling's Pharmacy for over 69 years. (Adv.)

The above information also is helpful should the record need to be checked, such as for possible incompatibility in cases where doctors are changed.

Belling's, located right in downtown Appleton, center of shopping, is dedicated to your better health. Dedication goes into every prescription — the desire to serve you and your health needs is the guiding principle for every pharmacist as he compounds prescriptions, dispenses medication and other health products.

See your doctor

Belling's suggest that now, following the holidays and the aftermath of the flu in Appleton, is a good time to see your physician for a complete physical examination. It is an investment that pays dividends in added healthy years of your life.

New drugs keep appearing to treat conditions that formerly would not lend themselves to treatment. Many persons are not receiving the latest treatment due to the fact that they have not visited their physicians of late, Belling's believes.

In addition to keeping the family health record file, Belling's provide free prescription delivery. Promptness goes into every prescription at Belling's. When you bring in a prescription, you can count on Belling's not to substitute. Qualified and experienced pharmacists fill it exactly as the doctor ordered. Phone number of Belling's is 733-5551. Bucks add to division lead

DETROIT (AP) —Detroit's Bob Lanier came to teammate John Mengelt's rescue but he may have saved the Milwaukee Bucks instead.

The 6-foot-11, 260-pounder —unnerved at seeing Milwaukee's 6-foot-6 Bob Dandridge jostle with 6-2 Mengelt — grabbed Dandridge around the neck late in the crucial game Thursday night between the National Basketball Association clubs.

Both benches cleared. Lanier got slapped with a technical foul. And Oscar Robertson of the Bucks sank the resultant free throw.

That gave Milwaukee a threepoint lead, 99-96, with only 1:11 remaining, clearing the way for a 102-99 Bucks triumph.

The outcome, before a season-record Cobo Arena crowd of 11,385, snapped a sevengame Piston winning streak and dropped third-place Detroit 4½ games behind leader Milwaukee in the tough Midwest Division race.

The Pistons are 1½ games behind runner-up Chicago, which beat the Bucks on Tuesday. The Bulls host Milwaukee tonight, while Detroit is at Buffalo.

"I guess it's a technical for trying to break up a fight," complained Detroit Coach Ray Scott afterwards. "The referee (Len Wirtz) told me Lanier should have grabbed Mengelt. It looked to me like Dandridge was trying to choke Mengelt."

Mengelt was asked if Dandridge took a swipe at him and he said: "Do you think Bobby would have grabbed him if he hadn't?"

The scuffle came moments after a layup by Detroit's Willie Norwood cut the Bucks' lead to 98-96.

Milwaukee led by some nine points most of the second half until a fourth-quarter comeback sparked by Dave Bing turned the closing minutes into a nip-and-tuck tussle.

"That technical was a big foul, no question about it," offered Bucks' Coach Larry Costello. "That extra point was a big point."

Scott said it was the turning point, adding: "It was a crucial call because instead of a jump ball with our being down by two points, it gave them one more point and breathing room."

Lucius Allen added a Milwaukee bucket and Bing countered for Detroit with 33 seconds left to make the score 101-98. Robertson sank a free throw with 15 seconds left and Curtis Rowe got one for the Pistons with six seconds remaining and that was the game.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, the 7-2 superstar center, topped the Bucks with 27 points, while Allen had 26 and Dandridge 21.

Bing led Detroit with 19, scoring 12 in final quarter. Rowe had 16 and Lanier was held to 11.

Russell Lee rejoins Milwaukee Bucks

MILWAUKEE (AP) —Reserve guard Russell Lee has returned to the Milwaukee Bucks' active roster and will be in uniform for tonight's game with the Chicago Bulls.

Lee has missed 17 games since injuring his knee and undergoing surgery in January.

The Bucks' active roster is now at the league limit of 12. Reserve center Dick Cunningham is still on the injury list, recuperating from an ankle operation in November.

Golden State trips Hawks

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer

The battle for first place in the National Basketball Association's Midwest Division is a neck-and-neck affair, but Bob Lanier shouldn't take it literally.

Lanier ended a scuffle between the Bucks' Bobby Dandridge and the Piston's John Mengelt by placing a clamp on the Milwaukee player's neck. Lanier's peace-making effort, coming with one minute left in the game, was worth a technical foul in referee Len Wirtz' eyes and the Bucks' Oscar Robertson sank the free throw to turn a two-point Milwaukee lead into a 99-96 advantage.

"I guess it's a technical for trying to break up a fight," said Detroit Coach Ray Scott after the Bucks had ended the Pistons' seven-game winning streak Thursday night with a 102-99 victory.

Elsewhere in the NBA, the Golden State Warriors downed the Atlanta Hawks 121-105 and the Phoenix Suns beat the Houston Rockets 107-99.

Suns 107, Rockets 99

Dick Van Arsdale's fourthquarter spurt carried Phoenix past Houston. Van Arsdale finished with a game-high 24 points.

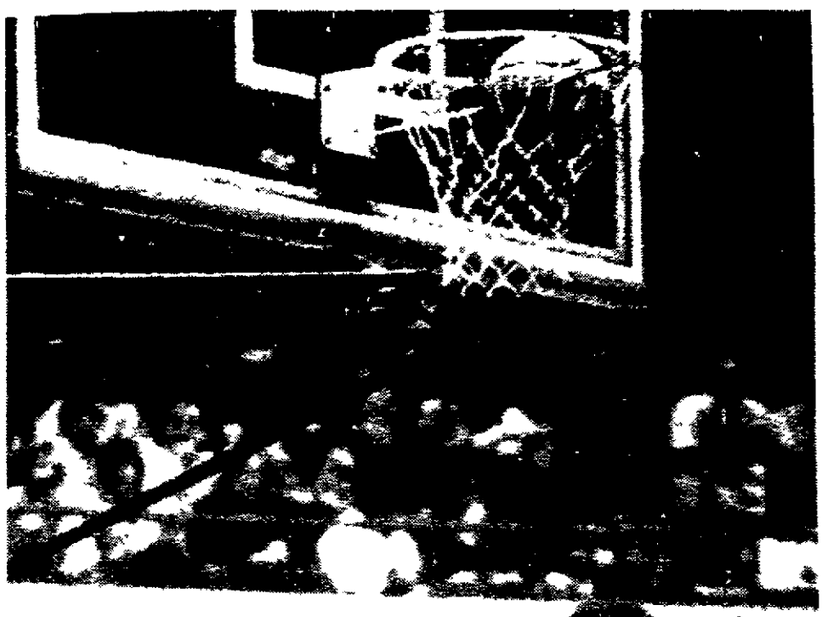
Rudy Tomjanovich had 20 for Houston.

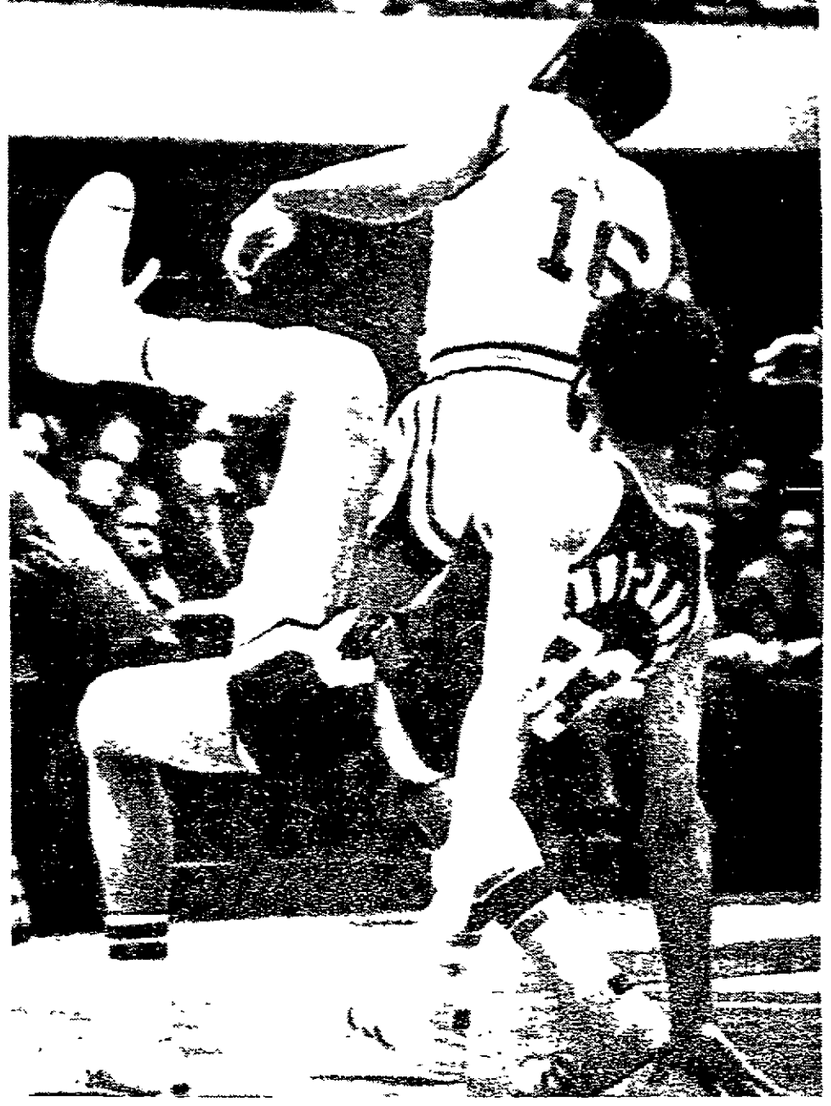
Warriors 121, Hawks 105

Rick Barry scored 25 points in the second half to lead Golden State past Atlanta. Barry totaled 33 for the night while Cazzie Russell contributed 30 for the Warriors.

Pete Maravich's 29 points paced Atlanta's scoring.

In the American Basketball Association it was: Utah 121, Kentucky 117; New York 125, Carolina 108; San Antonio 88, Indiana 83, and Memphis 106, Virginia 102.





Three-point shot

Milwaukee's Kareem Abdul-Jabbar (33) made a three point landing after colliding with Detroit's Bob Lanier (16), but still managed to make a basket during first quarter action of their NBA game at Detroit's Cobo Arena Thursday. No foul was called on the play. The Bucks won, 102-99. (AP Wirephoto)

Ghosts shade Patriot quint

BY MIKE BATES
Post-Crescent staff writer

A four-point surge early in the fourth quarter by Kaukauna broke the game's 15th tie and propelled the Ghosts past Appleton East 47-44 in a Fox Valley Association basketball encounter Thursday night in the Patriots' gym.

Kaukauna is now 7-5 in FVA games and East now owns a 3-9 loop slate.

Reed Giordana, the league's top scorer with a 19.9 average, drilled in two baskets to push the winners from a 35-35 deadlock to a 39-35 lead with 5:41 left in the contest.

East narrowed the gap to two points on three occasions, 39-37, 41-39 and 43-41. But the Ghosts spread out their offense until Tom Vaubel broke open under the basket. Vaubel missed the easy, short shot on his first attempt but put in his rebound and Kaukauna regained the four-point margin at 45-41 with 1:31 left on the clock.

Phil Plamann put in one free throw in a 2-shot situation to bring the Pats within 45-42 with :35 showing.

Kaukauna's Jerry Schumacher went high up on the boards to haul down the missed second free toss and the Ghosts worked the ball around until Vaubel was again open underneath. The 6-2 junior, who was fouled on the play with 6 seconds left, gave KHS its biggest lead of the night — 47-42 — by sinking both free throws. East's Jeff West closed out the scoring with a basket just before the horn sounded.

Giordana led both teams in scoring with 21 points. Vaubel followed with 14 for the Ghosts.

Plamann hit 15 points (12 in the first half) to lead East in scoring. Ray Schreiter and 6-8 junior Paul Haase chipped in nine points and eight points, respectively, for the Patriots.

Kaukauna raced to a 6-0 advantage in the first three minutes of the game as East was plagued by cold shooting and mistakes.

Plamann put AHS-E on track during the period and East forged to a 13-10 margin after the first eight minutes.

The Patriots took their biggest lead of the night twice during the second stanza (at 15-10 and 17-12) before the orange-clad visitors claimed a 19-17 lead shortly before the intermission. The two teams went to the locker rooms tied at 21.

During the third segment, the lead changed hands seven times and the score was knotted six times until Giordana put Kaukauna ahead 35-33 going into the fourth quarter.

Kaukauna head coach Ken Roloff expressed satisfaction with the way his Ghosts performed. "I was pleased with their poise. They kept their cool. East played a good game but we put the pressure on East."

Roloff also mentioned that "the kids have taken turns coming up with the big play, which certainly helps."

The loss has to be disappointing for East coach Tom Gossens. It was the third game in a row the Patriots have played good basketball and have come up on the short end.

Bobcats set for crucial weekend

GREEN BAY — The Green Bay Bobcats (13-18-2) face another double weekend at home, facing Chicago Saturday night before a crucial Sunday afternoon battle against the Marquette Iron Rangers. Green Bay is in third place in the Northern Division of the U.S. Hockey League, six points behind Marquette and a play-off spot.

Chicago is in fourth place in the Southern Division, but Green Bay Coach Paul Coppo does not foresee an easy game. Coppo says, "They have added some players and appear to be much stronger, as they have played several close games lately."

Green Bay and Chicago have played twice this season, with each team taking a win on home ice.

Sunday's game begins at 2:30 instead of the regular starting time of 2:00. (The time change is necessary to permit live television coverage). Marquette and Green Bay have met four times, with each team taking two wins.

Little Chute test at Weyauwega delayed

Little Chute High School's Central Wisconsin Conference basketball game at Weyauwega scheduled for tonight has been postponed because of the flu.

Weyauwega requested the postponement late Thursday morning.

The game has been re-scheduled for next Friday, Feb. 21.

Appleton rink loses in quarters

MT. HOPE, N.Y. (AP) —The Exmoor Highlanders of Highland Park, Ill.; the Buffalo, N.Y., Briers; the Virginia, Minn. Curling Club, and the Fairbanks, Alaska, Rockettes all won quarter-final matches Thursday in the U.S. Women's Curling Association Championships.

They were to meet in that order in semifinal matches today.

The four-day bonspiel, being held at St. Andrew's Golf Club and at the Ardsley Country Club, winds up Saturday.

One match went into overtime when the Detroit Rockettes scored two in the 10th end to tie at 10-10 but the Virginia Rink scored one in the 11th on the last shot by Mrs. Fred Newton Hahne, skip of Virginia.

Mrs. Richard Warner is the Exmoor skip, Mrs. William Baker leads Buffalo and Mrs. Wallace Burnett is skipping Fairbanks.

The Virginia rink had advanced with an 11-4 victory over Portage, Wis. The Columbine rink of Aurora, Colo., which lost to Fairbanks in the quarterfinals, had defeated Milwaukee 12-7.

In the first round of third event competition, Milwaukee defeated Skokie, Ill., 10-7, St. Paul nipped Portage 8-7, Bemidji edged Green Bay 9-8, Madison blasted Lodi 8-2 and Medford topped Wauwatosa 137.

Jet matmen favored in FVL regional test

Powerful Manitowoc Roncalli begins its drive toward a hoped for WISAA wrestling championship Saturday in the Fox Valley Lutheran regional.

The quarter-finlal round is slated to begin at 10:30 a.m. with the semi-finals at 1:30 and wrestle-backs at 2:30. The championship-consolation round will start at 7 p.m.

Roncalli, regarded as one of the top independent wrestling teams in Wisconsin, has 10 wrestlers in the tournament with seedable (.500 or better) records. Fox Valley Lutheran with nine wrestlers with winning records is expected to be the main challenger. St. Mary Springs and Lourdes each have seven seeded wrestlers and Waukesha Catholic Memorial, Wayland Academy and Madison Holy Name five each.

The top four finishers at each weight will advance to the state tournament next weekend at St. Thomas More High School, Milwaukee. Stevens Point Pacelli is defending champion.

Fox Valley Lutheran is led into the regional by heavyweight Kim Techlin, 18-0; 126 pounder John Koch, 13-6-1 and 155-pound Doug Mattek, 7-1. The Foxes' Guy Kimball, 17-1, split a pair of decisions with No. 1 seeded Dale Zipperer, 21-1, of Roncalli. Koch, Mattek and Techlin are top seeds.

Waukesha Memorial also has three No. 1 seeded entrants, while Roncalli has four. Jets top-rated, in addition to Zipperer, are Joe Waldmann, 112; John Leist, 138, and Tim Swoboda, 185. Nicklaus in familiar spot leading Campbell

LOS ANGELES (AP) —It had the look of a tournament from five years ago.

There was Jack Nicklaus in his customary spot atop the standings, leading the $150,000 Los Angeles Open Golf Tournament with a five-under-par 66 after Thursday's first round.

And there was the burly figure of Arnold Palmer in hot pursuit with a 68 despite a demoralizing three-putt green on the 15th hole when, for a moment, he thought he had a chance for a share of the lead.

"Actually, I played pretty well, even had a little confidence in my putting," the 44year-old Palmer said in a low voice. "And then I three-putted from eight feet—I thought I was going to make birdie and go to five under—and that ruined it all."

Still, the magnetic man who once dominated this game was tied for second with former PGA champion Dave Stockton and red-haired tour sophomore Tom Watson.

Lee Trevino headed a half dozen at 69 with John Schlee, Tom Kite, Buddy Allin, Jim Simons and Chuck Courtney.

Tom Weiskopf and Johnny Miller matched par 71 on the tough, old Riviera Country Club course, a hilly layout that Nicklaus ranks among his favorite in this country. It was the 21st consecutive round in which Miller had matched or bettered par.

Bobby Nichols, winner of the Andy Williams-San Diego Open earlier this year, was disqualified for an improper drop and defending champion Rod Funseth withdrew after shooting a 75.

Nicklaus, who led from wire to wire in winning the Hawaiian Open two weeks ago, had a superlative effort on the course that ranks among the most demanding the pros play all season.

He missed only one fairway and two greens—and birdied one of those holes He needed only 29 putts. "The round was good," said Nicklaus, usually his own severest critic.

"I putted well, I hit the ball well. I have no complaints.

"Oh, yes," he replied to a question, "I think I can shoot a better score than 66, but I don't know if I will."

His 66 was just one stroke off the course record and came despite the fact he twice missed putts of six feet or less for birdies. He did not make a bogey.

He chipped to four feet for birdie on the first hole, missed the green and chipped in from some 40 feet for a duece on the fourth, chipped up to three feet on the 11th, then dropped a pair of birdie putts in the 18-20 foot range to pull away from the field.

Palmer, who hasn't finished higher than 49th in two previous starts this season, said he was encouraged by his performance—the best of the year.

"It takes me a little longer to get anything going now," he said. "I can't lay off for a couple of months and then come back and expect to play well. I have to play my way into it.

"This was encouraging—except for that three-putt."

Unhappy Jack

Jack Nicklaus shows his unhappiness after missing a birdie putt on the ninth green of the first round of the Glen Campbell Los Angeles Open Thursday. Jack, however, finished with a 5-under-par 66 to grab a 2-shot lead. (AP wirephoto).

Fouls fatal to Bluejay '5'

By GEORGE MANCOSKY
Post-Crescent staff writer

OSHKOSH — Oshkosh North, with Menasha players parading to the bench burdened with five fouls, scored 25 points in the last quarter to upend the Bluejays, 75-66, in Fox Valley Association play Thursday night.

It was the first conference victory for the Spartans at home in their 2-year existence and so elated were the players that they tossed Coach Tom Wagner in the showers.

The triumph also boosted North into undisputed seventh place ahead of the Menashans. Both of its victories were scored over the Bluejays.

Fouls began to plague the visitors in the first half when several of their starters accumulated three. The situation worsened in the third stanza when they picked up their fourth, and in the last 4:43, starters Brad Kellett, Rod Bodmer and Marshall Richards and reserve Mike Langenhuzien all accumulated No. 5.

But despite the foul miseries, the Menashans could have tucked the game away early.

They had a 29-19 lead with 3:53 left in the second quarter, but the Spartans came on to score 16 of the last 19 points of the first half for a 35-32 lead.

Sparked by Kellett, who was playing with a very sore heel, the Jays regained the lead in the third period. They led by three points several times but fell behind, 50-49, at the end of the frame.

The lead traded sides a couple of times in the fourth stanza until Dave Hirte's two free throws and a basket by George Curtis gave the hosts a 61-58 edge with 2:58 left to play.

Menasha came within one, at 61-60 and 63-62, but at the latter juncture Curtis scored on a layup, was the recipient of Langenhuizen's fifth foul and, although he missed the free throw, Hirte was in the right place to put in the rebound.

The 4-point play gave the winners a 67-62 bulge. Bodmer back with a rebound basket for the Jays, but he soon became the fourth Menasha player to foul out and Bill Hickey converted twice.

North tallied eight of the final 10 points of the encounter.

Bodmer and North's Collin Strasser shared scoring honoring with 20 points. Kellett was runnerup for Menasha with 15 while four other Spartans collected 10 or more.

Bluejay Coach Clem Massey bemoaned the fact that his team was unable to put the Spartans away when it had the big first half lead.

"We didn't follow our game plan. There was too much free lance and in the end when we should have free lanced, we didn't," the dejected coach said.

"If we would have been patient, we could have had a 10-point lead at the half," Massey said.

Subtle discrimination?

MADISON, Wis. (AP) —About five years ago, the University of Wisconsin football team held its annual post-season banquet. To the surprise of the coaching staff, the 17 black players on the squad did not show up.

Grievances of the blacks were later aired, and changes were instituted.

But the attitude toward blacks on UW teams has not been quite the same since.

The next fall, only three blacks, including future star tailback Rufus "Roadrunner" Ferguson, were on the 55-member freshman football squad.

The number of blacks on the UW basketball team also fluctuated, and this season only two are on the 17-man squad.

Some blacks now feel the university may be discriminating against blacks in its recruiting efforts because of the unity they displayed in voicing their grievances in the late 1960s.

The suggestion is flatly denied by Athletic Director Elroy Hirsch, Football Coach John Jardine, Basketball Coach John Powless, and UW Athletic Board Chairman Frederick Haberman.

Mel Reddick, a bluechip prep athlete out of Chicago's Morgan Park in 1965 who later starred at Wisconsin, participated in the football dinner boycott in 1968.

One of the reasons for the protest was to get the UW to hire black counselors for black athletes. Reddick, now a UW law student, holds one of those counselor positions.

The 1968 team was plagued by far more than dissention caused by complaints of blacks. Coach John Coatta had just completed his second year at the helm and was 0-19-1. He was fired after the next season after compiling a 3-26-1 record.

Reddick said he believes the UW, whether consciously or not, has failed to utilize its black athletes fully in its recruitment efforts.

"Whether it's a subtle discrimination is hard to tell," Reddick said in an interview. "Since 1968, everything's been somewhat downhill for the black athlete at Wisconsin. It's kind of frightening."

Haberman insists he has never heard Hirsch or anyone else in the athletic department advise Jardine or Powless "how to recruit, whom to recruit or where to recruit."

Hirsch branded as "ridiculous" the suggestion that Wisconsin might be deliberately overlooking star black prep athletes.

Hirsch said all his coaches "want the best teams they can get and they can't have good teams without the material."

"We use all our athletes recruiting —black and white," he asserted.

One reason Wisconsin has had difficulty attracting outstanding black athletes, he said, is that unlike Ohio, Michigan and Illinois, Wisconsin lacks cities the size of Chicago, Detroit and Cleveland and their large black populations.

Jardine and Hirsch said Wisconsin, which has traditionally recruited heavily in Chicago, is now moving into the Detroit area.

Powless said his former starting center, Al Henry, now a top scorer in the Eastern League, is on the alert for basketball players in the Philadelphia area who might want to attend Wisconsin.

Lamont Weaver, one of the two black members of this year's team, said if there id discrimination against black recruits, he does not believe Powles can be blamed.

"He has to listen to the alumni," Weaver said. "There's politics involved."

Prof. James Jones, a member of the UW law faculty and the UW Athletic Board, and the first black to serve on either, said Reddick perhaps is correct in asserting that blacks should be used to a greater extent in recruiting efforts.

But, Jones said, the "real advances" will be made when Wisconsin has more blacks engaged fulltime in the administrative end of athletics.

Jones, who attended the then all black Lincoln University in Jefferson City, Mo., in the 1940s, said schools must be ready to compete for the top black athletes if they want winning programs.

"Was it startling that Michigan and Ohio State, when they played for the Big Ten championship last fall, each had a starting black quarterback?" Jones asked.

Davis holds big pin lead

NEW YORK (AP) —Dave Davis can afford a 185.

The 31-year-old southpaw from Atlanta saved his worst for last but can't be too concerned since he holds a commanding 309 pin lead as the final eight-game segment gets underway today in the $85,000 BPAA U.S. Open Bowling Tournament.

Davis rolled a 185 after stringing together seven earlier games of 248, 247, 236, 226, 255, 264 and 226 for a total pin fall of 1887 to lead the 24 survivors, cut from an original field of 240.

Davis, who hasn't won a tour title in over four years, built on an earlier 87 pin lead which he established after 32 games. He has totaled 9397 pins since play began last Monday, including 30 bonus pins for each head-to-head victory.

The smooth-rolling Davis was 6-2 in direct competition in Thursday's matches.

Earl Anthony, Tacoma, Wash., moved from ninth place to second on the strength of a 226, 217, 232, 278, 248, 288, 196, and 266 series. Anthony also showed a 6-2 mark but knocked down 64 more pins than Davis.

Anthony, with seven career PBA victories, was at 9088, 57 pins ahead of Dick Weber, the St. Louis pro who holds 24 PBA titles in a 15-year career. Weber went 4-4 in his eight games and with 16880 pins fell one notch in the standings.

Aaron to make final bow in Milwaukee

MILWAUKEE (AP) —The Milwaukee Brewers announced Thursday that their exhibition baseball game with the Atlanta Braves will be held May 6.

Official nof the American League Brewers said the game would probably be Hank Aaron's last baseball appearance in Milwaukee, since Aaron, has said he is considering retirement at the end of the season.

Aaron, who is within one home run of the major league career home run record held by Babe Ruth, will probably be the record holder when the exhibition is played.

Dantley scores 27 as Notre Dame wins

NEW YORK (AP) —Fordham got an "E" for effort but couldn't make the grade against Notre Dame.

For high scores, you can't beat "A" — and that's what Notre Dame had in Adrian Dantley Thursday night.

"He's been the big difference in our team," said Notre Dame Coach "Digger" Phelps after Dantley scored 27 points to lead a 79-69 victory over the Rams. "He gives us balance. We can strike from any side of the court."

The final score wasn't indicative of the Fighting Irish power and poise. Actually, the nation's third-ranked basketball team put the game away in the first half, running to an 18-point lead shortly before intermission.

In the only two other games involving Top Twenty teams, No. 7 Pitt beat Cleveland State 106-55 and 10th-rated Long Beach State overhauled Fresno State 62-45.

Dantley scored 14 of his points in the first half, when Notre Dame carved out a 46-31 lead while a Fordham-oriented crowd of 14,683 sat subdued. The Rams tried to make a game of it in the second half but fell short. The closest they came was eight points with less than a minute to play.

The game took its physical toll of the Irish. Three starters were hurt and had to leave with injuries at one time or other. Among them was center John Shumate, who twisted his right knee after banging into a teammate.

Billy Knight and Lew Hill each scored 17 points against Cleveland State and four other Panthers scored in double figures to pace Pittsburgh to its 20th consecutive victory.

The Panthers, 20-1, set a school record with 52 field goals, breaking the old record of 48 against Syracuse four years ago.

Long Beach State, led by Clifton Pondexter's 19 points and Glen McDonald's 18, poured in 15 straight points in the first half to overcome Fresno State.

Elsewhere in college basketball, Oklahoma City University had five players in double figures and upset Oral Roberts University 100-94 in the first college meeting between the two Oklahoma schools; Mike Arizin hit a 15-foot jumper with one second left which gave Coach George Balanis, who replaced Ed Ashnault as head coach Wednesday, and his William and Mary club a 64-62 victory, and New Mexico moved back into the thick of the Western Athletic Conference basketball race with a 89-72 victory over league-leading Arizona State.

Sabres win despite long stick call

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

Rocky Farr tends goal and carries a big stick —about an eighth of an inch too big.

It cost him $200 —but it cost the Los Angeles Kings a game.

Farr, in the Buffalo nets Thursday night, faced 26 Los Angeles shots and let two of them in. But they were too little too late and the Sabres came away with a 4-2 National Hockey League victory.

In other NHL games, the New York Rangers and Philadelphia Flyers tied 4-4 and the New York Islanders and St. Louis Blues tied 2-2. In the World Hockey Association, the Toronto Toros beat the Jersey Knights 5-2 and the Quebec Nordiques downed the Chicago Cougars 5-3.

"It looked to me like a big stick all through the game," said Kings Coach Bob Pulford, "but I thought I'd wait until the proper time to protest."

That time came with about nine minutes to play and Buffalo already leading 3-1. The Sabres' Mike Robitaille had just been penalized for highsticking. Then Pulford went for the big-sticking call.

He asked for a measurement of the blade on Farr's stick. The officials obliged —and said it was within the legal limits.

But Terry Harper, the Kings' captain, said the problem lay with the officials' equipment. It was outdated, he said.

The officials decided he was right and used a device graciously provided by the Kings. This time the blade was too big, Farr was fined $200 and, more important for the Kings, Buffalo was socked with a second penalty, served by Doug Rombough.

Rangers 4, Flyers 4

Third-period goals by Rick MacLeish, Simon Nolet and Bill Barber enabled Philadelphia to tie the Rangers. Steve Vickers, Bobby Rousseau and Pete Stemkowski connected for New York in the first period and the Rangers carried a 4-1 lead into the final period.

Islanders 2, Blues 2

Ed Westfall's goal midway in the second period enabled the Islanders to tie the Blues. His 14th goal was a bullet which broke the stick of goalie Wayne Stephenson and bounded into the net.

Nordiques 5, Cougars 3

Rejean Giroux, playing in his first WHA game of the season, gave Quebec a 4-1 lead at 13:09 of the third period by batting in a flying puck and the Nordiques held on to down the Cougars.

NHL purchases Seals

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) —Charles O. Finley hinted he turned a profit by selling his hockey team, the Seals, then returned to the arbitration table where his Oakland A's baseball players are seeking more money.

"I still think hockey is a great sport," the Chicago insurance millionaire said Thursday after the California Golden Seals were turned over to the National Hockey League for more than $6 million.

The team was a loser, both on the ice and at the box office, in 3½ years of Finley ownership. The Seals, who left Oakland today to start a road trip, are last in the NHL Western Division and averaging only 5,000 fans per home game.

Finley bought the team in 1970 for a reported $4.5 million. He said he was "completely satisfied" with the amount he received from the NHL.

Finley discussed the sale, which had been pending for two months, at a news conference after A's captain and third baseman Sal Bando argued over the arbitration table why he should receive $100,000 for the coming baseball season.

Ted Kubiak's hearing was held Thursday afternoon. The cases of Gene Tenace, Joe Rudi and Reggie Jackson, three stars of the world championship team, are scheduled between today and next Tuesday.

Finley, who suffered a heart attack last summer, has been advised by doctors to sell all his sports teams. He still owns the American Basketball Association Memphis Tams, as well as the A's.

Finley said his main concern when he bought the Seals was to make sure the team stayed in the San Francisco Bay Area. The NHL, whether it continues to maintain the team itself or sells to another party, also intends to keep the franchise in the area.

Ex-cage coach Freeman dies

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) —James A. "Buck" Freeman, who coached college basktball for 45 years, died Thursday after a period of ill health. He was 69.

The one-time coach at St. John's University had been an assistant to a former pupil, Frank McGuire, for most of the past two decades. He was with McGuire at the University of North Carolina, then came with him 10 years ago to the University of South Carolina. He retired last year.

He established a 179-32 record at St. John's on becoming its coach on graduating in 1927. He later was its athletic director, and coached basketball at Scranton University.

Freeman was credited with developing multiple defenses, switching on defense, screens and the give-and-go style of offense.

Skiing outlook

By CHUCK TORINUS

Temperature levels are lower and new snow accumulations are small this week, but all in all skiing should be reasonably good for Fox Cities skiers over the weekend.

Two ski areas in Michigan's Upper Peninsula lead popular hills in this part of the Midwest with three inches of new snow. Both Brule Mountain and Cliff's Ridge are offering excellent conditions because of the added powder. They are joined by Pine Mountain with two inches and Indianhead Mountain with an inch. "Very good" skiing is available at Porcupine Mountain and Big Powderhorn Mountain, also in the U.P.

Of the hills reporting in Wisconsin, Mt. Telemark is the only one offering excellent skiing with an inch of new over a 20-26 inch base. "Very good" and conditions can be enjoyed at Hidden Valley, View Ridge, Rib Mountain, and Camp 10.

In other final games of the season, Kaukauna whipped Maplewood, 59-29, Neenah Red topped Roosevelt, 58-37, Wilson downed Madison, 53-38, and Neenah White bested Einstein, 55-37.

The Papermakers built up a 38-23 lead after three quarters and their reserves played most of the final quarter. The victors led 28-18 at halftime. Heading the team's well-balanced scoring attack was Jeff Verhagen with 12 points. Tom Hagany banked 11, while Jeff Vandehey and Tim Rusch counted 10 apiece. Leo Swiontek hit 10 for Butte des Morts.

Ross Giordana and Dale Wirth scored 14 points apiece to lead Kaukauna. The victory gave the Ghosts undisputed possession of second place.

A 20-point performance by Greg Prichette spurred Neenah White past Einstein. The Whites led, 24-13, at intermission. Tom Hanley added 11 and Steve Stoesz 10 for Neenah White. Terry Wendt counted 10 for Einstein.

Appleton St. Mary '5' suffers first loss

Appleton St. Joseph handed Appleton St. Mary its first basketball loss of the season, 40-30, Sunday. The result ties the Catholic Boys League lead into a 3-way knot among St. Mary, St. Joseph and Sacred Heart—all at 12-1.

Jeff White scored 22 points for St. Joseph, now 15-2 overall. Tim Fountain led St. Mary (16-1), with 17.

Weekend outdoors outlook

Snow conditions for downhill and cross-country skiing are good to excellent across the state, and the snowmobile trails on state-owned lands should provide many miles of scenic riding this weekend, according to the Department of Natural Resources (DNR).

Ice fishing has generally been less than spectacular, but there are some bright spots. Around Madeline island in Lake Superior, several 5-10 pound lake trout have been taken, and perch are hitting in Chequamegon bay, particularly east of Ashland in Ashland county. However, ice conditions in the Apostle island area are unpredictable, and extreme care must be taken when traveling on the Lake Superior ice.

Further south in the Hayward area of Sawyer county, panfish are biting in Big Round lake and Lake Chetac. In north central Wisconsin, ice fishing in the Woodruff area is listed as fair although walleyes have been caught in the Willow flowage and Lake Tomahawk in Oneida county, and catches of panfish have been taken in Lake Tomahawk, the Minocqua thoroughfare, Carroll lake, Big Bearskin lake, Minocqua lake and Lower Kaubashine lake also in Oneida county.

Around Antigo in Langlade county, perch and walleyes are biting in the Eau Pleine flowage, Marathon county, and panfish are biting at Sawyer and Rolling Stone lakes in Langlade county.

In Oconto county, bluegill fishing is good on most of the small lakes, walleye action is fair on Archibald, Kelly and White potato lakes, and northern pike fishing is good on Chute pond and the Townsend flowage. Ice fishing continues to be good on Shawano lake in Shawano county, where the fishing pressure is high and good catches of pike are being taken.

Along Lake Michigan, panfish and perch are biting on Bullhead, Long, Hartlaub's and English lakes in Manitowoc county. In the Lake Winnebago area, walleye fishing on Winnebago's east shore is slow, but walleye and sauger action is picking up along the west shore. In Waupaca county, northerns are hitting on the cutoff in the Chain O'Lakes, and walleyes are being caught on the Wolf river in the New London area. Panfishing is best on the Upper Chain O'Lakes and White lake.

LAKE MICHIGAN DISTRICT

Oshkosh Area:
Calumet county — Walleye fishing on the east shore of Lake Winnebago is slow, but snowmobiling is good.

Wautoma Area:
Snowmobiling conditions are good throughout the area, with the addition of some more snow. All trails are open.
Green Lake county — A few lake trout are being taken on Big Green lake, with minnows as bait. Most of the lakes are still unsafe for car travel. Puckaway lake continues to produce some good catches of large walleyes and northern pike.
Waupaca county — Some northerns are hitting on the cutoff in the Chain O'Lakes. Walleyes are being caught on the Wolf river in the New London area, and panfishing is best on the Upper Chain O'Lakes and White lake.
Marinette Area:
Florence county — Ice fishing is generally slow, but snowmobiling is excellent.
Marinette county — Ice fishing has picked up during the past week on most of the lakes. Caldron falls is reported to be the "hot spot" for crappies. Snowmobiling is excellent.

Perch and walleye are biting in the Eau Pleine flowage in Marathon county, and panfish are hitting at Sawyer and Rolling Stone lakes in Langlade county. Trout have been caught in Moose and Florence lakes, Langlade county. Snowmobiling and cross-country skiing conditions are good.
Woodruff Area:
Fishing was only fair in the Lakeland area last weekend. Some walleyes, northerns and crappies were taken in the Willow flowage, Oneida county, and occasional walleyes were caught in Lake Tomahawk, Oneida county. Fair catches of panfish have been taken in Lake Tomahawk, the Minocqua thoroughfare, Carroll lake, Big Bear Skin lake, Minocqua lake, and Lower Kaubashine lakes, Oneida county, as well as Big Arbor Vitae and Gunlock lakes in Vilas county. Snowmobile use was very heavy on the lakes and trails in Oneida, Forest and Vilas counties.

NORTHWEST DISTRICT

Brule Area:
Take extreme care when traveling on the ice in the Apostle islands area. Ice conditions change from day to day, and the ice around Madeline Island is unpredictable. Fishing is picking up in Pequmky bay, and on Madeline Island several 8 to 10-pound lake trout have been taken. Perch fishing in Chequamegon bay is good, particularly east of Ashland. There are 20 inches of ice on most inland lakes, covered by 4 to 6 inches of snow. Some lakes have several layers of ice, water and slush. Generally, fishing pressure has been slow on lakes in the Brule area. Bluegill fishing has been fair on the Gordon flowage, but some fair catches of crappies were taken on Amnicon lake. Snowmobiling is good in the area with 14 to 18 inches of snow on the ground.

Beloit quint not likely to repeat as champions

BELOIT, Wis. (AP)—The Knights of Beloit Memorial High School are host for a WIAA Class A sectional basketball tournament this year, but the defending state champions may not even be in the final four team field.

Beloit, trying to rebuild after losing four of the five starters from last year's title team, will finish the regular season well below .500 and must get by a stiff test in the Delavan-Darien regional in order to earn the right to play in its own sectional.

The Beloit Sectional field includes one other state tournament team from a year ago— waukesha, which owns an impressive record and is the favorite to emerge from its own regional as one of the sectional qualifiers.

Other regionals are scheduled at Fort Atkinson and Salem, and in most cases the pairings match teams that already have faced each other in regular season play.

At Delavan-Darien, Beloit battles Lake Geneva Badger in its opening test. Southern Lakes Conference powers Burlington and Delavan-Darien collide in the other semifinal.

Burlington and Delavan will go into the meet as champions of their respective divisions in the Southern Lakes. The winner is the logical pick against the Beloit-Badger winner in the regional final.

At Waukesha, three Parkland Conference teams join the host Blackshirts and both semifinal games loom as good matchups. Muskego and New Berlin Eisenhower square off in the opener in a contest of two teams struggling through less than spectacular seasons, and Waukesha takes on New Berlin West in the second game.

West has strung together an impressive winning streak since losing its first two games by small margins and is a candidate to upset Waukesha, which is bidding for a third straight state tournament berth.

Fort Atkinson, one of the top clubs in the Badger Conference, tangles with Mukwonago, second in the Southern Lakes Eastern Division, in the Fort Atkinson regional.

Whitewater, runnerup to Delavan-Darien in the Southern Lakes West, is favored against Waterford. Should Fort and Whitewater win opening games, the host team will get a chance for revenge since Whitewater slipped past Fort 59-56 in the season's first game.

Kenosha's two public schools, Bradford and Tremper, battle each other on a neutral court in the Salem regional. Bradford has the better record, but several of its wins have been close.

The second game, pitting Salem Central against Union Grove, could be interesting since the teams have near-identical records in the Southern Lakes East. They split their games this season, with Grove winning 56-53 at home and Salem by 71-54 on its court.

Regional games are scheduled Friday and Saturday, March 1-2, with the four survivors convening in Beloit the following weekend.

Most of Southeastern Wisconsin's Class B teams will funnel through the Brookfield Central Sectional, with regionals scheduled at Ripon, Campbellsport, Kettle Moraine and Elkhorn.

Central Suburban Conference champion Milton has a good shot at getting through the Kettle Moraine meet. Markesan, one of the Dual County Conference's top squads, is the likely qualifier at Ripon.

Two teams ranked by the Associated Press' Class B poll, Sheboygan Falls and Mayville, are in opposite brackets and could meet for the title at Campbellsport. The Elkhorn regional shapes up as a four way dogfight between the host team, Clinton, Evansville and Beloit Turner.

Pats second in gym triangular

Manitowoc High School took first place with a score of 109.39 and Appleton East compiled 107.15 points to finish second in a gymnastics triangular meet recently.

Appleton West took third place with 103.61 points.

Casey Edwards was the Patriots' top performer with wins in long horse vaulting, floor exercises, the parallel bars and the all-around competition.

East's Pat Long was first on the horizontal bar, while Steve Mitchler took the still rings event.

Appleton West won no first places. Its top performers were Bill Treiber (floor exercises) and Rick Okada (parallel bars).

Taking second place for Appleton East were Steve Van Rooy (long horse and floor exercises), Mitchler (parallel bars) and Long (all-around).

Appleton East copped the jayvee meet with 132.21 points and Appleton West was second with 90.06. The Patriots' Tod Fuerst posted victories on the high bar, rings, floor exercises and all-around competition.

Sixkiller picks CFL Argonauts

TORONTO (AP) —Sonny Sixkiller, former star quarterback for the University of Washington Thursday signed a two-year contract with the Toronto Argonauts of the Canadian Football League.

The full-blooded Cherokee Indian, who broke 15 school records while at Washington, was passed over during last year's National Football League draft because of his size—5-foot-11, 190 pounds—and because of a knee injury his senior year.

"I think it was the brand of football when it was a choice between Anaheim, the World Football League franchise and here," Sixkiller said.

Badger deletion made without Bo's approval

MADISON, Wis. (AP) —Michigan Football Coach Bo Schembechler is standing by his story that a member of the University of Wisconsin Athletic Board slept during Schembechler's 1966 interview for the Badger football coaching job, the Madison Capital Times, said Thursday.

The newspaper said Schembechler insisted in a telephone interview that an agreement to delete that statement from his book, "Man in Motion" was done without his approval.

The deletion agreement was made between Joe Falls, Detroit Free Press sports editor who co-authored the book, and Michigan Athletic Director Don Canham, the Capital Times said.

Dairy co-ops to push for shift in milk prices

BY DAVID WEITZ
Post-Crescent Farm Editor

Wisconsin dairy co-op members will press Secretary of Agriculture Earl L. Butz to alter formulas used to determine price support levels for butter, milk powder and cheese, which are scheduled to be announced in April, charging that present price plans are creating unstable markets for dairy products.

"We've got a real dilemma in the butter market," said Charles Farr, Madison, director of the dairy division of Wisconsin Federation of Cooperatives, noting that milk used in making butter and milk powder is worth less than an equal amount of milk used in making cheese because of unequal pricing under federal price support systems.

Under present pricing 100 pounds of milk, at 3.5 per cent butterfat, is worth $8.53 if used to produce cheese but only $7.29 if used to produce butter and skim milk powder.

"Our disparity is very great."

And to secure milk supplies from farmers the plants producing butter and dry milk powder must match competitive pricing that is established for the higher-priced cheese market, explained Farr.

The Minnesota-Wisconsin price for milk during December, a schedule which reflects the value of milk used in manufacturing, showed milk was marketed for $7.94 per hundredweight.

But because butter prices have dipped to support price levels makers of butter could secure a return of only $7.29 on their product.

Tom Schromish, Manitowoc, of Lake to Lake Dairy Co-op, said butter prices reached a climax in September after the federal price freeze was lifted and climbed to about 85 cents per pound. During October, however, prices plunged 12.5 cents per pound when imports of butter were announced.

Schromish said the co-op is producing as much cheese as possible and avoiding the less favorable butter production.

James Kasten, Shawano, a representative of Consolidated Badger Co-op, said the organization has reduced sharply its output of butter and is instead using milk for increased cheese production.

"A plant that's making cheese can pay about $1.50 more per hundred to the producer than as if he was making powder."

The co-op has reduced production of dry milk powder at its Appleton plant and butter at a Wittenburg facility. The co-op has accelerated output at a Marshfield cheese processing plant.

Present federal support prices are 60.9 cents per pound for butter, 65 cents per pound for cheese and 41.4 cents per pound for dry skim milk powder, said Farr. "There's about a 55-cent advantage to the cheese milk now."

Mrs. Goodman worked with program assistants funded under a federal program who worked with families in the county.

Supv. George Schroeder, route 2, Kaukauna, said the county Agriculture and extension education committee plans to fill the vacancy after conferring with extension service officials.

State meat output climbs from '72

MADISON —Meat production climbed 8.9 per cent in Wisconsin in December compared to a year ago, according to a report of the Statistical Reporting Service, an arm of the federal and state agriculture departments.

"Meat production increased from November to December for cattle but decreased for hogs, calves and sheep and lambs," said the report.

Wisconsin slaughtering plants killed 109,000 cattle during December. That was 2,000 more than during November and 8,000 more than a year earlier. The average liveweight of cattle was 1,144 pounds and was a 10-pound increase from the previous month. Total red meat production in December was close to 106.7 million pounds, said the report.

Nationally commerical production of red meat sagged 3 per cent from a year earlier and 6 per cent from November. The December production, nationally, was 2,892 million pounds.

Farm Union, NFO, blast one-stop farm center

A plan to consolidate the offices of four federal farm sefvice agencies into one-stop service centers has been attacked in Wisconsin by both the National Farmers Organization and Wisconsin Farmers Union.

The groups have objected to the plan contending it will reduce farmer influence in the agencies and make access to services more difficult for farmers.

The service centers are being planned at the order of Secretary of Agriculture Earl L. Butz as part of a national effort to increase efficiency in the agriculture department.

The first of five state hearings to discuss the reorganization will take place at 1 p.m. Tuesday at the Fox Valley Technical Institute auditorium in Appleton.

Both Gilbert Rohde, president of the Wisconsin FArmers Union, and Steve Pavich, president of the state National Farmers Organization, have attacked the consolidation.

Both praised 7th Dist. Rep. David Obey, D-Wis., for his attack on the plan.

The Wisconsin Farmers Union will consider the Sunday consolidation during its annual meeting through Tuesday at LaCrosse.

"The effectiveness of farm programs has to a large part been due to their administration, locally, by farmers committeemen," said Rohde. "it would be a grave disservice to agriculture to weaken this system in the name of 'economy' and 'efficiency.'"

Pavich said the hearings were vital to avoid planners from eliminating offices that now provide services to farmers.

"The NFO, both in Wisconsin and on the national level, have already indicated our opposition to the one-stop service center idea. We have just heard too many rumors of wholesale decreases in the number of ASC and FHA offices, and we don't see how that is going to improve services to farmers or to rural communities."

State may toughen egg grades

MADISON — Wisconsin's egg regulations may be toughened to meet federal specifications and new labeling requirements may be instituted for egg packagers, according to proposals that will be discussed at 2 p.m. Feb. 26 in hearings at the state agriculture department offices, 801 W. Badger Road.

The major changes, according to Arnold Guthrie, poultry specialist,

Arnold Guthrie, department poultry specialist, said the major changes would:

— Adopt federal grade and size specifications as Wisconsin specifications;

—Require all egg containers to show name and address of packer or distributor, grade and size of eggs and date of grading;

— Increase fees for a state egg marketing program.

— Establish minimum facility and operating requirements for egg packers.

The minimum standards are being proposed to assure consumers that eggs are packed under sanitary conditions, said Guthrie.

Wholesale price rise near record

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices boomed upward in January at the second highest monthly rate on record as the inflationary spiral stretched across the entire economy, the government said today.

Sharply higher wholesale costs for farm products, industrial commodities, consumer finished goods and fuels pushed the wholesale price index up by a seasonally adjusted 3.1 per cent, a rise exceeded only by the record 6.2 per cent of last August.

If January's rate is computed on an annual basis, it comes out to an annual rate of inflation of 37.2 per cent —3.1 per cent a month for 12 months.

Wholesale prices, accelerating in the past few months, have risen at an annual rate of 32.3 per cent in the past three months, a record. In the past 12 months, they have gone up 20.8 per cent, the second highest rise for any 12-month period since October 1947.

Wholesale price rises mean that the higher costs will be translated into higher retail prices in the weeks ahead, as inflation shows no letup for the consumer.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics said wholesale prices in January actually rose at a monthly rate of 3.5 per cent when usual seasonal influences are subtracted.

Prices of farm products and processed foods and feeds jumped 5.1 per cent on a seasonally adjusted basis; industrial commodities 2.3 per cent and consumer finished goods 2.8 per cent. All three figures reflected an economy caught in a tremendous inflationary grip.

A month earlier, wholesale prices went up 2.2 per cent.

The Nixon administration has offered consumers hope that the price surge will let up in the second half of this year.

The bureau said the wholesale cost of fuel accounted for almost 40 per cent of the jump in industrial commodities prices, with refined petroleum products leaping by 7.7 per cent and crude oil 22 per cent.

But fuels were not the only commodities rising sharply. Nonferrous metals were up sharply. So were prices for chemicals, paper products and machinery.

Of farm products, livestock prices jumped 15.4 per cent, milk 4.2 per cent, eggs 3.8 per cent, grains 8.9 per cent and fresh fruits and vegetables 7.5 per cent.

In wholesale processed foods, prices of meats, poultry and fish were up 7.8 per cent, dairy products 2 per cent and processed fruits and vegetables 1.1 per cent.

Wholesale prices of motor vehicles and equipment climbed 1.2 per cent as did prices of railroad equipment. The bureau also said other products caught up in the inflationary spiral included household and commercial furniture; appliances; floor coverings; metal household containers; dinnerware; tires and tubes; crude natural rubber; plastic film; shoes; leather goods, and toys and children's vehicles.

The only industrial commodity group showing a decline in price was lumber and wood products, reflecting drops in the prices of softwood plywood and softwood lumber.

The only farm product showing a decline was live poultry, which dropped nine tenths of one per cent.

The bureau said that the price index climbed last month to 150.4 of the 1967 average, meaning that on the whole it cost $15.04 to buy the same volume of wholesale goods that cost $10 in 1967.

No rationing for now, Lucey says

MADISON, Wis. (AP) —Gov. Patrick Lucey restated Thursday that he felt gasoline rationing, even on a voluntary basis, would not be needed in Wisconsin for the time being.

Lucey retained the view he expressed last week despite a cut in Wisconsin's gasoline allocation for this month from 87.2 per cent of its Feburary, 1972, consumption to 85.2 per cent.

"I don't think the present situation justifies rationing," he said. "Any kind of rationing tends to distort...the operation of a free market. No matter how well you design it, there still are built-in inequities.

The governor commented after meeting with state energy coordinator Stanley York following a visit to Washington by York to discuss the situation with federal officials.

Lucey said federal officals used figures to determine this month's gasoline that state tax records indicate were two million gallons short of the state's actual demand for gasoline.

The chief executive said Wisconsin will have to accept the lower allotment this month, but federal officials promise to be more careful in determining the state's fuel quotas in the future.

York said federal officials were not able to fully explain how they decided to cut Wisconsin's allocation.

The energy coordinator said one petroleum company has informed him it already has diverted 53,000 gallons of gasoline which had been destined for Wisconsin to states where quotas were expanded.

Although the situation in Wisconsin will be "very tight" this month, York said, it will still be better than many other states.

Overnight stay

Mrs. Richard Nixon and David Eisenhower arrive at University Hospital in Indianapolis Thursday to see Julie Nixon Eisenhower, who was recovering from an emergency operation. A White House spokesman said the President's daughter was having post-operative discomfort and pain but her condition was considered satisfactory. She is expected to be in the hospital seven to ten days. (AP Wirephoto)

Julie improving following surgery

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (AP) — Julie Nixon Eisenhower was in satisfactory condition today after undergoing surgery Thursday for removal of a benign ovarian cyst, her White House doctor said.

Dr. William Lukash gave the report after an early morning visit with the President's 25-year-old daughter at Indiana University Medical Center here. He came here with First Lady Pat Nixon from Key Biscayne, where they were with the President.

Mrs. Eisenhower was in surgery for 44 minutes Thursday night while two of the state's leading gynecologists stopped internal bleeding and removed the cyst.

Mrs. Eisenhower is recovering in the powder-blue carpeted sixth floor executive suite. Mrs. Nixon and Julie's husband, David Eisenhower, are also staying at the hospital.

Reached in Washington, Mrs. Nixon's press secretary, Helen Smith, said Julie was "in satisfactory condition" and had been seen by the two specialists who performed the operation.

"She did experience some pain and nausea during the night, but that was normal," Mrs. Smith reported.

She said, "All vital signs are within normal range."

Mrs. Eisenhower sat up in a chair for a brief period during the night, Mrs. Smith said, and was visited by both Mrs. Nixon and her husband during periods when she was awake.

Mrs. Eisenhower had a liquid breakfast and expressed a desire to eat, which Mrs. Smith said was "a good sign."

Her mother and husband had rushed by separate military jet planes to be at her side shortly after the operation.

Mrs. Eisenhower had come to Indianapolis for an editorial meeting of the Saturday Evening Post, where she is a $10,000-a-year assistant editor.

Dr. Cory SerVaas, wife of Curtis Publishing Co. board chairman Beurt SerVaas, said Mrs. Eisenhower became ill during the meeting and was taken to their home in the northwest Indianapolis suburbs.

"Julie complained of pain in her lower back," Dr. SerVaas said. "She spent a restless night at our house and by Thursday noon she was in extreme pain."

Dr. SerVaas took Julie to Dr. Sprague Gardiner, one of the state's leading gynecologists, who found substantial internal bleeding and had Mrs. Eisenhower admitted to Krannert Pavillion of the university's medical center.

"At first we thought it was an ectopic pregnancy," Dr. SerVaas said. "But we found she had a benign ovarian cyst.

"The cyst was removed and the bleeding was stopped. Everything went well."

Dr. SerVaas added the operation should not affect Julie's ability to bear children.

Both Dr. SerVaas and hospital spokesman Harrison Ullmann emphasized there was no tubular pregnancy, as some reports had stated.

2 of U.N. force killed at Suez

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) —Two Finnish soldiers with the United Nations peacekeeping force were killed and seven others were wounded by mines in an unmarked minefield in the U.N. buffer zone west of the Suez Canal, the Finnish Embassy reported today.

The embassy said four of the wounded were in serious condition.

It reported:

A Finnish captain was slightly injured Thursday afternoon when he detonated an antipersonnel mine in the field. A group of Finnish soldiers rushed to his rescue, and their vehicle hit an antitank mine, killing two of the men and injuring six others.

An embassy spokesman said he did not know whether the mines had been laid by the Egyptians or the Israelis. But reports of the incident in Israeli newspapers said the minefield was Egyptian.

Meanwhile, Damascus Radio reported that Syrian and Israeli tanks and artillery dueled for nearly two hours on the Golan Heights today after a clash in which four Israeli soldiers were killed.

There was no comment from the Israeli military command.

The official Syrian radio also reported the return of President Hafez Assad from Algiers and said his meeting there with three other Arab chiefs of state upheld the two principles endorsed at the Arab summit last November: complete Israeli withdrawal from Arab territory and guaranteeing the rights of the Palestinians "to their territory and homeland."

The two principles were mentioned in the communique issued in Algiers Thursday by Assad, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, King Faisal of Saudi Arabia and Algerian President Houari Boumedienne. But the emphasis put on them by Damascus Radio appeared to be a reminder of the Syrian regime's previous statements that it will not agree to a disengagement agreement with Israel unless Israel agrees to withdraw from all lands captured in the 1967 and 1973 wars.

Cardinal robbed

CHICAGO (AP) —John Cardinal Cody of Chicago and another man believed to be his chauffeur have been robbed of $233 at gunpoint on a Near North Side street, police report.

The crime took place Thursday night as the two men were walking from Holy Name Cathedral to an auto, officials said.

Neither man was hurt.

Police said Cardinal Cody, 66, had asked that no information be released about the crime, but when pressed by reporters officers provided some details of the incident.

The robbers reportedly took $200 from the cardinal and $33 from the other man, but did not take the cardinal's ring or pectoral cross, both symbols of his position.

Two persons reportedly picked up by police were released after the cardinal failed to identify them as the robbers, officers said.

Of the cardinal's request that the police report of the incident not be made public, Deputy Police Supt. Walter Vallee said, "If the victim wants to remain anonymous, we will do it. With unusual people, we acknowledge unusual requests."

Protection for Agnew defended by Treasury

WASHINGTON (AP) —The Treasury Department has refused to lift its Secret Service protection of former Vice President Spiro T. Agnew, calling such protection "neither unprecedented nor unreasonable."

The department made its position clear in a letter to Rep. John E. Moss, D-Calif., who had asked that the protection be terminated.

However, top Treasury lawyers pointed out that Secret Service protection was previously given to public officials outside the executive branch.

The letter said such protection had been given Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., during the 1972 presidential campaign even though he was not a candidate, and that Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., had an escort for six months following expiration of his term as vice president.

"It is Treasury's position that we are carrying out a presidential order which is neither unprecedented nor unreasonable," said Edward C. Schumlts, general counsel for the department.

Moss had demanded an end to the protection, citing an opinion from the General Accounting Office that "the presidential directive to the Secret Service request on such protection does not constitute legal authority to provide it."

However, the Treasury said, "the statutes are silent on affording Secret Service protection for former vice presidents of the United States."

Agnew resigned his office last October 10 after entering a plea of no contest to a charge of income tax evasion.

The GAO, which is an arm of Congress, has reported that Agnew's protection cost nearly $90,000 from the date of his resignation through Dec. 15.

Agnew is currently on an extended stay in California, accompanied, according to Moss, by from 12 to 21 agents.

Treasury sources say threats against Agnew were received immediately following his resignation but that there have been no threats for some time.

The sources say, however, that Secret Service protection for Agnew probably will be withdrawn sometime in April.

Republican Sen. George D. Aiken of Vermont, after 33 years of service, announced Thursday that he will not seek re-election this year. Aiken, 81, said in Washington, "my decision not to be a candidate for another term was made some years ago."

Jaworski moving to confrontation

WASHINGTON (AP) — With a strongly worded letter to the chairman of the Senate Judiciary committee, special Watergate prosecutor Leon Jaworski has moved toward a confrontation with President Nixon.

"It is now clear that evidence I deem material to our investigations will not be forthcoming," Jaworski said in a letter Thursday to Sen. James O. Eastland, D-Miss. The White House said the President himself made the decision to end cooperation with the investigations.

Jaworski disclosed that the material the President had refused to supply included the tapes of 27 presidential meetings and telephone calls related to the investigation of the Watergate break-in and cover-up. That number was far higher than had ever been indicated by the prosecutor's office.

Jaworski said that in rejecting his requests, the White House had given no indication "any requested recording is either irrelevant to our inquiries or subject to some particularized privilege."

Eastland was in Mississippi and had no immediate comment on the letter.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., a judiciary committee member, said he would request an early meeting of the panel "to consider the ominous implications of Mr. Jaworski's letter."

Deputy White House Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren told newsmen at Key Biscayne, Fla., that the President had decided Jaworski already had received sufficient material "to allow the grand juries to proceed with their work without further delay."

Asked if the President was considering firing Jaworski, Warren said the question "is not before us; the situation hasn't been raised."

It was after a confrontation over access to White House tapes that Nixon fired former special prosecutor Archibald Cox last October 20.

Jaworski succeeded Cox. In testimony before the Senate Judiciary Committee, Jaworski said he had assurances of cooperation from the White House and would report any breakdown to the committee.

Vice President Gerald R. Ford said Jaworski's letter indicates "that the White House has cooperated sufficiently for him to carry out his duties."

Jaworski's letter said that while he has sufficient evidence for criminal indictments, "the (requested) material is important to a complete and thorough investigation and may contain evidence necessary for any future trials."

Ford said, "I don't think the doors of the White House should be open for every piece of paper the committee wants. Those doors should not be open to any fishing expedition."

Meanwhile, the President's Watergate counsel, James D. St. Clair, was engaged in negotiations with the House Judiciary committee over access to White House files for the committee's impeachment inquiry.

John Doar, chief counsel for the House inquiry, and Albert Jenner, minority counsel for the probe, told newsmen Thursday that St. Clair wanted assurances that confidentiality of White House files would be protected.

Friends give account of Solzhenitsyn's trip into exile

BASEL, Switzerland (AP) —Alexander Solzhenitsyn arrived in Basel by train today en route to Zurich. He was accompanied by his Swiss lawyer and a woman interpreter.

The Russian Nobel Prize winner, who was kicked out of the Soviet Union for his latest book about Stalinist labor camps, had spent two nights in the rural West German village of Langenbroich.

Awaiting the exiled Soviet writer in the Swiss financial center were the large fortune his books have accumulated for him in the West and the voluminous records of lawyer Fritz Heeb's dealings on Solzhenitsyn's behalf with publishers in Europe and America for the past five years.

It was not known how long Solzhenitsyn planned to stay in Switzerland. But Heeb indicated earlier that he would probably settle in Scandinavia.

The Paris newspaper France-Soir estimated that the writer has amassed at least $6 million in royalties from the publication of his books outside the Soviet bloc.

Heeb has said that Solzhenitsyn told him two years ago that he wanted his royalties used for humanitarian purposes inside the Soviet Union. But that was in the days when the writer thought Soviet law protected him from expulsion and that he would live out his life in Russia.

Solzhenitsyn talked by telephone with his wife in Moscow after he arrived in West Germany Wednesday, and they had another conversation for 25 minutes Thursday night, friends said. But his host in West Germany, novelist Heinrich Boll, told newsmen today Mrs. Solzhenitsyn would remain in Moscow until her husband finds a permanent home.

"She does not want to travel to and fro between hotels with three children," Boll said.

Tass, the official Soviet news agency, reported after Solzhenitsyn was expelled from the Soviet Union Wednesday that his family could join him "when they deem it necessary."

The family includes the couple's three sons, Mrs. Solzhenitsyn's 11-year-old son by a previous marriage, and her widowed mother. Friends of the family thought the Soviet government would let all of them leave.

Boll said Solzhenitsyn spent most of Thursday conferring with his attorney at Boll's country home in Langenbroich and now wants to decide in Zurich on his future moves and where he will eventually settle.

"He wants to gain clarity about his entire situation," Boll said. "During his two days in Langenbroich, he used the time to recover physically and relax psychologically while making his first direct contacts in the West.

"He had to collect himself first.... He has a good sense of humor. He is lively and very vital."

The bearded Russian author refused again Thursday to grant interviews to newsmen, telling them: "No interviews,

Letter of faces: prepare one for friend

BY CAPPY DICK

Today's fun-project is for boys and girls who have pen pals. The idea is to prepare a letter in which the sender first draws the outlines of a lot of faces, then writes the words of the letter on those drawings. Such a letter is a good exercise in cartooning. The letter writer will have fun preparing it and the friend will enjoy receiving it.

Start with a piece of paper of letter size. With pencil or pen and ink, draw the outlines of as many faces as space will accommodate as shown in the illustration above.

When the faces have been completed, write the letter on them. Needless to say, the letter will be one of the most unusual the friend will ever receive.

The letter can be made even more unusual by applying light tints of water color paint to the faces. When the paint has dried, proceed to write on the faces. The colors will add interest to the over-all effect.

Tomorrow: Handy idea to use on your mucilage bottle!

Mary personifies 'Alice'

BY SANDRA SHACKELFORD
Post-Crescent staff writer

Mary A. Hopkins personifies the "all you will become" section of the Alice in Dairyland brochure.

Headquartered at the Conway Motor Inn this week the current Alice in Dairyland was doing her best to promote the state's annual Department of Agriculture sponsored contest. She related what it has meant to her personally to be a spokeswoman for the dairy industry.

The brochure states that "Alice" will become one of Wisconsin's best known young women." She has become that. "...experienced in all phases of public relations." She does well. "...familiar with Wisconsin's internationally famous food industry telling its story throughout the state and nation." She leaves no doubt that she "likes it here." "...acquainted with many of the nations' business, civic and governmental leaders." Says Mary. "All of the famous people I've met are famous for their personalities in their own right."

The brochure didn't let on to her unflinching ability to be candid.

Her experience as industry's public relations person has prepared her for business. Constant speaking engagements have given her polish beyond her years.

Named Alice in Dairyland last June 15, Mary already has logged between 50,000 and 60,000 miles in her travels. As good will ambassadress she's told audiences how to use the state's dairy products with flair.

"People are looking for the best nutritional value for the money," she offered, when asked if prohibitive prices will cause a decline in cheese sales.

One of the hints she willingly offers for handy homemakers includes a cheese based fudge which is mixed in the hands and can be kept in the refrigerator from three to four months.

After promoting cheese in some areas, she explained, sales soared 300 per cent. She envisions no threat to the state's industry from imported products basing her judgement both on population growth and demand.

"We intend to provide the needed market for cheese."

While many state programs are being cut back during a year of skyrocketing inflation, Mary affirmed that some consideration has been given to abandoning the Department of Agriculture promotion which pays her $8,200 a year.

"They received such overwhelming positive response that they decided against it," she offered.

The University of Wisconsin-Eau Claire student, whose future includes work with retarded children, doesn't consider herself to be an usual human commodity.

Rather, "I'm someone who has gone through life very blessed. I want to give what I have to other people."

Her faith in God has been a constant affirmation of how she feels about herself and about others. If she has personal appeal, "It's derived from my sense of Christianity."

Mary is often asked political questions. But she strives to set aside her own persuasions for her promotional work. "You don't promote yourself," she stated. "You promote Wisconsin.

"People see me as representing their opinions," she cautioned. "I don't believe in using the media to push my own views."

There are changes she would like to see made in the annual Alice in Dairyland program.

"I'd like to have the public more informed," she explained, stressing the positive aspects of a program she feels offers a means of attaining personal growth and experience.

It's been quite a year for the young Wisconsin woman who will relinquish her PR role June 15. As Mary puts it, "You pack a lot of growing up into one year."

Ann Landers

Leave those dials alone, kids

Dear Ann Landers: I am a 74-year-old reader, male, and have been wanting to write to you for about a year. I asked my neighbor if she thought I should and she said, "Wait a few months and some other nut will write in with the same problem." Well, I've been waiting and nobody has—so here it is:

I have 12 grandchildren and four great-grandchildren. God bless them. They like to come to Grandpa's house and I enjoy having them. But my dear wife passed on in 1971 and the housekeeper can't see very well, or she doesn't want to. Anyway, Ann, I have a secret complaint against these kids and I am going to let them read it in the paper. They never miss your column.

I keep the air conditioning and the heat adjusted the way I like it. When they come in they fiddle with the thermostat and upset the temperature. Then they monkey with my TV and get it out of focus. My radio is set to the station I enjoy, but they change it to a rock station. My typewriter is busted, which is why I am writing this by hand.

I don't need to sign my name. They know who I am. Thanks, Ann.—Gramps

Dear Gramps: So much for your appliances. Are your vocal cords also out of commission?

If your young relatives are steady readers they will see themselves here today. But why do so many of you want me to do your dirty work? Speak up, Gramps.

Dear Ann Landers: You have made plenty of trouble for me and I want you to know it. It's hard enough to be a step-mother—now I've got double trouble because Ann Landers says, "A high school student should be able to date if she is dependable and has a sense of responsibility."

My step-daughter is in high school. She is only 14 but has the body of an 18-year-old. The problem is she has the mind of a 10-year-old. We have told her no dating in cars until she is 16. All hell broke out around here when your column appeared.

Thanks for nothing.—Reader From The Old School

Dear O.S.: Go back and read my advice again. Then read it to your step daughter. I said a high school girl who has integrity and record of dependability should be permitted to date. According to your letter, that child has neither. You're on solid ground, Mother. Don't let her beat you down.

Dear Ann Landers: Recently you ran a letter from a guy who enjoys dressing up in women's clothes. He complained that the mail-order catalogues (his best source) don't show anything feminine because the dames in this country have gone nutty over pants, mannish shirts, denim and suede. He can't order anything in silk or chiffon with ruffles and frills and he's not getting his kicks.

Your advice was, "Buy the fabrics yourself and find a seamstress who can keep her mouth shut."

It's people like you who make trouble for people like us. By suggesting that he find a seamstress who can "keep her mouth shut" you plant the idea that there is something evil about a man wearing feminine apparel in the privacy of his own home. If I (and millions of others) enjoy it, whom does it hurt? You owe us all an apology. Another Way

Dear Way: O.K. I apologize. Buy your own fabrics and find a seamstress with a big mouth.

Energy crisis 'muddling' seen by Aspin

BY FRANK CHURCH
Post-Crescent staff writer

The Nixon administration — with large doses of conservation measures aimed at consumers but little else — is "hoping it can muddle through" the energy crisis without having to do much else.

That's the way U. S. Rep. Les Aspin, D-Racine, sees it. He has been a frequent critic of the oil industry and the administration's efforts to meet the energy crisis.

Aspin was speaking on the energy crisis at the Lawrence University union this week. It was the third talk and question-and-answer session he had gone through during his one-week sojourn at the university.

"It's clear that they're (administration officials) playing it by ear" and "hoping they aren't going to have to do something," he said, asserting that public pressure resulting from some shortages and price increases probably won't be enough to force major action.

Only when "people get angry enough" will the administration push for major changes, like rationing, oil industry control and more.

The President's first two speeches on energy were loaded with "oodles of good, great ideas about what the consumer can do" to cut down on the use of energy, he said, but little on what the oil industry can do.

Aspin related that to the $5.5 million in 1972 campaign contributions the President received from the oil industry.

"You know when people give lots of money . . . they don't do it because they think he's a swell fella," he told the largely student audience assembled in the union. "They want something favorable," he continued.

He said earlier, however, that although he feels the energy crisis is largely the result of too little control by government and too many advantages for the oil industry, there has never been any evidence shown of collusion between the industry and government or among the oil companies themselves.

But the heavy contributions to Nixon in 1972 represent a "horrible kind of intertwining," he said.

Answering the only question that did not deal with the energy crisis, Aspin said that if the roll call was taken today, he'd vote for the impeachment of Richard Nixon.

The First District congressman said five things must be done to meet the energy crisis:

- More information on reserves, production, refinery capacity and more must be received from the oil industry.
- There must be an excess profits tax on the oil industry, which would act mainly to stimulate further exploration and research.
- Foreign tax credits for oil companies must be eliminated. In a press release from his Washington office today, Aspin said this $3 billion tax loophole could be closed simply through a change in Internal Revenue Service regulations.
- A program for the development of new, non-fossil fuel sources of energy must be started.
- The relationship between the government, consumer and big oil must be defined. Aspin called this the most crucial question.

Aspin said he wasn't sure what the relationship should be. Nationalization of the oil industry shouldn't take place, however.

"Government can't run its own business; it shouldn't run the oil business," said Aspin.

Breaking up the industry — separating the production, refining, transportation and other aspects from one another to stimulate competition — might also destroy the savings that come through size.

Other proposals — regulatory agencies, consumer and government representation on oil company boards of directors — have also surfaced in Washington.

There are many alternatives to this and other problems making up the energy crisis, Aspin said.

"There's lots of suggestions, but al-

Froehlich raps gas cutback

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal energy coordinator William Simon was asked Wednesday by Rep. Harold Froehlich, R-Wis., for a complete explanation of the Federal Energy Office's reallocation of gasoline supplies.

Froehlich said in a telegram to Simon that the FEO did not provide him information on the action, which cut Wisconsin's February allocation by two per cent, until three days after the plan was put into effect. He said information made available since that time has been incomplete and contradictory.

"It seems to me that when the Federal Energy Office is undertaking measures as serious as these they should provide clear and complete information to the appropriate officials before the actions go into effect," the Wisconsin Republican said.

Froehlich called the plan "discriminatory, unclear and without adequate justification." It takes previously allocated gasoline away from 10 states and gives it to 12 other states and the District of Columbia.

"The actions of the Federal Energy Office penalize states like Wisconsin which have been national leaders in energy conservation, and reward states which have been slow to act," he said.

The congressman said at least four states receiving extra gasoline under the FEO plan have not lowered highway speed limits — Illinois, Kentucky, Tennesse and Mississippi. He said other states slated to receive additional gasoline, such as Delaware, have only had lower speed limits for a short time.

"Wisconsin has been successful at conserving gasoline, but we still have serious problems in areas like Florence, Forest, and Vilas counties," Froehlich said. "It simply does not make sense for the FEO to disrupt our efforts to solve Wisconsin energy problems in order to help states which are not making an equal conservation effort."

Froehlich in Sturgeon Bay today hailed a report that federal energy investigators will fan out across the country to doublecheck prices and supplies of propane gas. He said he had received many complaints about steep increases in propane prices and had learned that some propane brokers are under scrutiny for allegedly profiteering through extravagent brokers' fees.

Froehlich said he was disturbed however by the announcement that other Federal Energy Office action teams will travel to 19 states and the District of Columbia to assess the gas situation but Wisconsin is not among the states.

FEO Deputy Administrator John Sawhill said that the team reports could provide a basis for determining if additional emergency allocations are necessary.

"If the FEO teams do not come to Wisconsin," Froehlich said, "they may be misled about the situation. I am strongly opposed to any additional reduction in Wisconsin's allocation of gasoline and I am still not satisfied at all with the explanation for the reduction announced last Saturday."

The Wisconsin State Chamber of Commerce has also protested against the "arbitrary 'selective' reduction in Wisconsin's gasoline allocation." Kenneth Haagensen, executive vice president of the organization, sent telegrams to Simon and the state's congressional delegations opposing the short allocation.

He noted that because of the state's travel-oriented recreation industry, especially in the economically disadvantaged northern area, and its agricultural industry, continuing or further curtailment of Wisconsin's fair share would cripple those industries.

Little Wolf board to fill staff needs

BY CAROL DIEHL
Post-Crescent correspondent

MANAWA — Additional faculty to be hired for the 1974-75 school year was decided by the Board of Education of the Little Wolf School District at this week's meeting.

The school district will employ a speech therapist full time next year, a 50 per cent increase over the present year. This request of Dr. Robert G. Ames, superintendent, was granted in compliance with Chapter 89 which provides for equal educational opportunities for all children between the aages of 3 and 21. This state statute is to be in effect in all school districts by 1975.

One full time guidance counselor will be hired for kindergarten through grade 8 and the elementary guidance counselor through the intern program will be continued. A request for a remedial reading teacher for grades kindergarten through third grade, one day a week, was also granted. This step was taken to meet the state standard which is part of the new 13 standards that must be in effect by the 1975-76 school year.

Request for art and vocal music for kindergarten through grade six were postponed. Further evaluations are needed for interns for industrial arts and science-math; special education, 7 - 12; part time safety and health co ordinators and summer driver education instructors.

The school board accepted the resignations of three teachers effective at the end of the school year; George Lehto, guidance counselor, driver education and audio-visual instructor; Amy Kraemer, special education teacher, and Rita Wonoski, kindergarten teacher.

Inservice council in compliance with the new state standards was approved by the school board and superintendent. The council will consist of seven members headed by Ames with two representatives from each school in the district. Terms will be for two years except the first year when three members will have one-year terms. Members will be reimbursed by the district at the rate of $5 per meeting. Ames said he anticipated about five meetings per school year.

The council will conduct needs assessment for inservice training and list priorities and objectives, then plan the program and evaluate the progress. The group will also have to evaluate the program of each individual teacher in meeting the inservice requirements set by the state.

Clerk James Loughrin also notified the school board that Carl Dretzke, a candidate for area 1, city of Manawa has withdrawn his name from the ballot for school board election. Remaining on the ballot is Mrs. Patricia Jepson now running unopposed as are the other three candidates who are all incumbents. They are Loughrin, area 6; William Beck, area 5, and Kenneth Smith, area 4.

There are six areas within the Little Wolf district and the positions are based on the location of residence, although every voter in the district casts his ballot for all vacancies on the school board. Voting will take place in the April election as no primary is needed.

In other action the school board:

— Learned of the hearing and conference called by Cooperative Educational Service Agency 8, based in Appleton, pursuant to the detachment request of Paul Thompson to attach his property to the Marion school district. CESA agencies 7 and 8 and all municipal clerks have been notified of the petition. Hearing is scheduled for 8 p.m. Feb. 26 in the commons of the Little Wolf High School. Thompson's property is presently part of the local school district although it borders the Marion line.

— Accepted the resignation of Mrs. Richard Heideman as kindergarten bus driver and approved the hiring of Mrs. Betty Stiebs as her replacement, effective immediately.

— Granted approval for an additional high school course for ½ credit on recommendation of the pupil-service team which will be taught by Lee Dietrich, guidance counselor.

— Raised the price of adult milk to 10 cents per carton, effective at once.

— Asked for a meeting with the town clerks and town chairmen within the school district following the Feb. 26 hearing regarding the payment of tax

Continuing effort

Fremont span prompts petitions, stand-by plan

BY VIRGINIA SCHMIDT
Post-Crescent correspondent

FREMONT — The long wait for construction to begin on the village's new bridge and the dilapidated condition of the old span have prompted local citizens and officials to take action in two areas:

- A petition is being circulated in an attempt to hasten construction of the new span.
- Standards for operating procedures for "unsafe bridge" or "bridge out" conditions have been adopted by the village emergency center, the fire department.

Not only signatures of village residents appear on the petitions. Traffic on the U.S. 10 bridge represents travelers from a wide section of the Fox River Valley.

The petitions urge replacement of the bridge "at the earliest possible moment."

The petition reads:

"We deem the bridge to be unsafe and in danger of imminent failure. We feel the bridge is of insufficient width to permit vehicles to pass safely on it. In the event of an anticipated failure, the rerouting of traffic would produce great inconvenience and difficulty for the traveling public."

Tentative plans are to send the signed petitions to area legislative representatives in Madison and Washington and to other officials.

The construction of the new bridge has been discussed for many years. The project was taken off the state priority list in November, 1969. Three years later, it was announced that construction would start in the summer of 1974. But rumors again are causing concern over the present priority listing and available funding.

Because of the condition of the present span and concern for the safety of anyone traveling over or under it, standards for operating procedures in the event of an emergency have been adopted by the fire department.

Fire Chief Gordon Puls and assistant chiefs David Kinsman and Robert Kramer are in charge of setting the plan, suggested by Vern Johnson, emergency government director, into action.

Should a bridge failure arise, Johnson, the Waupaca County Sheriff's Department, the Waupaca County Highway Department and the Corps of Engineers, Appleton, will be notified.

Both approaches to the bridge would be barricaded and standy-by personnel would be assigned until law enforcement officers and highway personnel arrive.

Persons needing emergency hospitalization or other care when "bridge out" or "unsafe bridge" conditions exist have been instructed which ambulance service to contact, depending on which side of the river they live on. Cline Hanson Ambulance will handle calls on the north side, Lewin Ambulance will handle calls on the south side.

Communications posts on the north side will be manned by Dale Luedtke and Peter Lantvit. Those on the south side will be handled by David Kinsman and Robert Kramer.

The rules and telephone numbers will be posted at the fire station.

Lenny's fight continues

CHILTON — Lenny Schneider is only 10 but he's had more problems and disappointments than most people do in a lifetime.

He had another disappointment this week when he learned he would have to have his kidney removed. It was his third. His own did not function, nor did the two donated one.

Lenny, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Schneider, route 4, Chilton, has been battling the ailment that struck him three years ago valiantly. He's become a veteran of hospital visits, "but these days he is a bit down," explained his mother.

Mostly, she said, he is cheerful, despite the many complications he's had to cope with during his short life.

His mother was Lenny's first donor after his own kidneys had to be removed. But shortly after the transplant it became apparent it would not work. Lenny went back to the Milwaukee hospital to have it removed. Those trips had to be made periodically because the child had to be put on the dialysis machine to have his blood cleansed.

Now they will start once more, for the kidney which Lenny received three months ago from an unknown donor, also failed to function.

The operation had been a success and for the first three months it appeared as if it would continue to function, but a few weeks ago, all the signs that it would have to be removed became apparent once more.

"He knew himself that he would be without a kidney again," Mrs. Schneider explained.

She has been in Milwaukee with her son for the past few days and reported that Thursday wasn't too bad for Lenny. He had received a bundle of Valentine's Day cards, which helped boost the sagging spirits.

"He'll need that for the operation Monday," she commented. "And I suppose after that," for Lenny will once more be put on the long list of people waiting for another donor.

W-B board will discuss enrollment, staff needs

WITTENBERG — A special meeting has been set for Monday in the high school conference room to consider teaching staff needs for 1974-75 as well as a proposed five-year plan for elementary attendance centers to cope with declining enrollments.

In other business at the school district board meeting Monday, bids were opened from agents for the Ward, Wayne, Blue Bird, Thom as and Superior bus body manufacturers. Net quotations for three 66-passenger units ranged from $17,964 to $19,431. A recommendation concerning the purch ase was to have been formulated by an ad hoc committee of three board members meeting with the business affairs manager. Chassis bids will be accepted and opened at the regular meeting of Feb. 25.

Art Marsh, board member, reported about the 13 standards to be met to qualify for the state aids formula. Supt. Erwin Wickstrom noted that a primary reading consultant and a media specialist would have to be added before the 1975-76 school year if the working drafts of 12 task force reports were to become a part of the state superintendent's standards, a part of Chapter 90 of state laws.

The costs of these programs would be about $20,000 to $25,000, to be funded locally with regular state aid. Added staff members are likely to be needed for implementing Chapter 89, to include a teacher with background in special learning disabilities, plus an increase of 50 to 80 per cent or more of psychologist services.

Ben Eder, director of elementary education, discussed the need for arranging with agencies from neighboring counties to provide certain services necessary under Chapter 89. He also mentioned that the completed plan is almost ready to be submitted to the Department of Public Instruction, Bureau for Handicapped Children.

A contract was approved for Mary Ann Ehlers as teacher aide for the Birnamwood I.G.E. program, effective Jan. 18, 1974.

Mary Brinckman, high school special education teacher, has requested release from her 1973-74 contract. Although the starting date for her successor is Feb. 25, 1974, affirmative action by the board was made dependent upon securing of a suitable replacement.

Clintonville students on the job

BY MILDRED LAIB
Post-Crescent staff writer

CLINTONVILLE — An expanded cooperative education program that involves 29 students and 20 firms is under way for the second semester at Clintonville Senior High School.

Robert Danielson, local vocational education coordinator, explained that last summer work was done to change the industrial education curriculum to allow for the cooperative training of students.

The new program also grew out of recommendations of business people who in the past had students from business education classes at the high school for only a two-week period.

Working with Danielson are Mrs. Shirley Essmann, coordinating teacher for girls participating in office occupations; Craig Hodne, coordinating teacher for boys participating in trades; and Dave Bowers, coordinating teacher for boys in agricultural fields.

Danielson said, "This is the first time that a cooperative education program has been offered for this length of time in Clintonville. The success of this semester's program will to a large extent determine the success of future cooperative education programs.

"Much time and effort have been spent by the teachers to make the program successful, and I'm sure the students involved will represent their high school well while on the job."

The only criterion for students in the program is that they must be seniors in their second semester who have made a tentative commitment to seek employment in that kind of occupation for which they are receiving training or have tentatively agreed to seek additional training beyond the high school level such as at Fox Valley Technical Institute. One of the girls plans to study business education at a university following graduation.

Prior to being placed in their cooperative work stations, the students have taken courses that relate to their work during their sophomore and junior and first semester of their senior year.

During the first semester, the girls took a two-hour class in office practices, some emphasizing the secretarial aspect and others the clerical side.

The boys in trade and industrial occupations are placed in areas of machine shop, welding, auto mechanics, electrician's helpers, sheet metal, heating and air conditioning, farm power, farm equipment and agricultural sales.

One girl is training as a machinest at the FWD Corporations. "At the last report, she is doing a very good job," Danielson said.

The boys in the program were enrolled in open shop for the first semester. The three boys in welding worked a minimum of an hour every day during the first semester just in the area of welding, and some boys spent more than an hour daily.

Training is given at school prior to being placed on the job. Danielson cited as an example a student who is getting training in power mechanics, who plans to go into the service after graduation and hopes to get more training there.

Students are paid either the federal or state minimum wage, whichever applies, and are on the job from 1 to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday. The program started Jan. 28 and will continue through May 31. "Local businesses and industries are spending in excess of $13,000 in salaries to support this cooperative training program," Danielson commented.

With the first three weeks of the program almost completed, Mrs. Essmann said, "I think the program has

Gunman gets drugs from store

Several ounces of narcotic drugs in injectable, powder and tablet forms were taken in an armed robbery of the Ford Rexall Drug Store, 322 W. College Ave., just before 6:30 p.m. Thursday.

No shots were fired and no injuries resulted, although the robber took an 18-year-old female clerk as a hostage for a short time after he obtained the drugs.

Police were continuing their search today for the suspect, described as "clean-looking" and in his 20s.

Police gave these details of the robbery:

The man entered the store and browsed in the aisles, declining help from the clerk.

After several minutes, he went to the rear counter, where the clerk was assisting the only other customer, an Appleton woman who was having a prescription filled.

The man then pulled out a long barreled pistol and pushed the customer behind the counter, where he ordered her and the clerk to get down onto the floor. He said he didn't want to hurt anyone.

The robber ordered the druggist to give him the morphine, codeine and other hard drugs. While the druggist was getting the items from a storage cabinet, the robber became impatient and ordered him to hurry and give him everything.

The drugs were placed in a paper bag by the robber, who then took the clerk with him as a hostage. He told the druggist to wait five minutes before he called anyone, a statement similar to that used by a robber who took $50 in narcotics at Morton's Drug Store in Neenah last Saturday.

After the two were outside, they climbed a small embankment by the rear alley and walked across the post office parking lot to Washington Street, where the robber instructed the clerk to walk east. He walked rapidly west.

The girl spotted a police squad car a short distance away and summoned the officer, who radioed an alert to other officers.

The witnesses told police the robber appeared nervous and that he may have been under the influence of drugs at the time. He also took a box of poison, but at no time demanded any money.

A spokesman for the store said the exact losses would not be determined until the completion of an inventory, probably Saturday.

The robber, believed to have been armed with a .45 caliber pistol, was described as about 6 feet tall, with a slim build, narrow face, dark eyes and brown hair. He was wearing a green quilted ski jacket, red gloves and baggy blue jeans.

been very successful. It is giving the students a much better background than we were able to give them before when it was only a two weeks' program, as we just barely got started and the program was finished.

"I think it is a wonderful opportunity for the students going directly into the labor market or some additional training after high school. There are 12 girls in the business education program.

Hodne reported that he makes weekly visits to the students at their job sites to see how they are doing. He also talks to their employers to check on the students' performance, initiative, attitude toward the job, cooperation and knowledge. Hodne said that he wants to get "feedback" from the employer.

"In general, I think that the program so far has been a big success," Hodne said. "Students we have working at these various locations in the community are getting a very honest experience . . . and, aside from just learning how to do something, they are also learning how to be responsible for themselves."

Talking about the program, Bowers commented, "It is a little bit early to tell just how it is going to work out, but from what I've seen so far, things seem to be going along real well. I think it is a good program —something that's going to have a future at the high school and one way in which we can get the agriculture-oriented students out to see whether they are designed for agri-business or farming and such.

"Most of the time in Clintonville, all of our agriculture is kind of production oriented. This way we are getting people placed in ag-business and I think that might be an asset and might channel other students to go to vocational school in the future.

"The program seems to be rolling along pretty smoothly so far," Bowers concluded.

Adolph Berndt, one of the students in the program, is working at Clintonville Fire Apparatus Inc. He said, "I like it as it is interesting work and I'd doing something different each week. As all the pre-assembled units for the trucks are built here, it involves layout work and welding. My high school background has been helpful — what I didn't learn there, I will here."

His foreman, Larry Persha, said, "I think it is a real good program and one that should have been done a long time ago. Berndt is doing real well and learning a lot. Hopefully, some day we can get someone like him down here to keep (on the job). This program is one of the best things to happen in this area."

Another student, Mary Wisnefske, is working at the First National Bank of Clintonville. She said, "I like it real well and am learning a lot about what a bank really does for people. I'm applying basic concepts from my high school classes plus learning to operate new machines. Also, I'm learning to get along with people on the job. I hope to stay in something like this after graduation."

The students in the program have been assigned as follows: Urban Telephone Corporation, Janie Gonzales, Charlene Finger and Gail Schertz; Caroline Implement, Harold Steenbock; Clintonville Motors, Randy Cisewski; Rexnord, Inc., Mae Shadduck and Dave Faehling; Utility and Tool and Body, Karen Koelbl and Richard Reeck; Clintonville Fire Apparatus, Adolph Berndt; Clintonville Cooperative, Dennis Stickney and Barb Sullivan; Nu-Craft Inc., Jim Herman.

L. K. Precision Tool, Mark Prothero; Tripod Chevrolet, Mark Mauel; Farm Equipent Sales, Bob Machowiak; Wisconsin Gas Company, Katy Hankins; Mitchell Sheet Metal, Keith Mitchell; Art Kiermas Motors, Steve Meyer; Clintonville Lumber and Supply, Nancy LeNoble; First National Bank of Clintonville, Mary Wisnefske; Peterson-Built Products, Joe Ruch; Patterson Manufacturing Company, Larry Hartwig; Krueger's Electric and Sign Company, Jerry Long.

most no consensus," he said.

Tracing the oil industry fortunes during the 1970s to show how declining profits — partly the result of government regulations on prices and lowering of the depletion allowance — paved the way for the shortage.

Government, while it could freeze prices and cut the depletion allowance, "had absolutely no power" to make the oil companies increase production. Washington had "lots of carrots but no stick."

The oil companies enjoy a "tremendously advantageous position" that must be ended, through some form of control or regulation' he said.

During the question period, Aspin also said:

- There's going to be a "big, big shift in votes" when the matter of using highway trust fund money to aid mass transit comes up again in Congress this year. It was defeated when it came to a vote in 1973, primarily by those arguing that highway money should not be used for mass transit purposes. The energy crisis has changed the minds of many, Aspin said.
- "I don't know how you can do it," he said, when asked if stringent enough environmental controls could be placed on the mining of shale for oil extraction.
- The days of energy waste in this country are gone, he said. Either shortages or rising prices will insure that.
- The administration's allocation system for gasoline, said Aspin, is "really bad."

For one thing, he said, it calls for reductions of between 10-12 per cent, while the oil industry's records show gasoline availability down only 2 per cent from last year.

- The length of the strike of independent truckers, because of high diesel prices and their inability to pass along the increased costs because of federal price controls, was a result of a "leadership vacuum" caused by Watergate and related scandals.

"It was a question of who's in charge," he said.

- The public's declining confidence in Congress, as reflected by a recent Harris poll, is more a reflection of hard times than the actual job done by the legislative branch.

"Every year that I've been in Congress, that Harris poll has dropped," he quipped.

monies to the school district.

The school board also discussed pupil control measures at the high school involving truancy, smoking on school premises and lack of student responsibility.

Upon motion of the school board, the superintendent was instructed to direct the high school principal, Harry Goetz, to put the pupil control measures into effect to correct the situation

No action was taken by the school board about the proposed computer terminal for the high school on a shared-time basis with another school. The cost of the program for the 1974-75 year was estimated about $3,655 and the contract would be for a three-year period with Northeast Educational Processing Laboratory, Green Bay. After the three-year contract, the cost of the computer post would be paid and costs would drop by more than 50 per cent.

Earlier, the school board had moved to enter into the contract if releases could be obtained from the vocational program funded by Title III in cooperation with three other school districts.

Relative to federal funding, Ames also informed the school board on the position of the Title I project in effect during the present school year in the Manawa Elementary School. This project in cooperation with CESA 8 provides assistance to students with reading disabilities with the help of high school tutors on a one-to-one basis. Ames explained the time involvement on the part of staff and administration needed for the program.

A special report was also given on the hot lunch program and plans are underway to stimulate participation and to introduce the food preparation plans of the program to the students.

Bond is raised on Berlin man on aiding rape charge

NEENAH — A Berlin man charged with aiding and abetting rape appeared in County Court in Neenah Wednesday hoping to have his $5,000 bond reduced, but instead it was raised to $15,000.

James P. Bloy, 21, was arrested Feb. 3 along with Denice D. Stumpner, 26, and Cindy Carpenter, 19, at their route 2, Berlin residence in connection with the Nov. 23 rape of a 26-year-old Oshkosh woman. Stumpner is charged with rape and Carpenter with false imprisonment.

All three are affiliated with the D.C. Eagles motorcycle group. Bloy, formerly of Appleton, previously had been found guilty of contributing to the delinquency of a minor in connection with the abduction and rape of two 15-year-old Appleton girls in Little Chute last Feb. 25.

At their preliminary hearing examination that began Wednesday before Judge James G. Sarres, defense attorney Alan Eisenberg Jr. asked that the $5,000 bond for each of the two men be reduced. Carpenter is already out of jail on a $200 bond.

Instead of reducing the bonds, Sarres ordered that Stumpner's be paid in cash, if and when it is, and that Bloy's be raised to $15,000. Both men remain in jail. The complainant also testified at the examination before it was adjourned for continuation to 2 p.m. March 6.

We Believe A Stereo System Should Sound Better At Home Than It Does On Paper.

If you have $400-500 to put into a stereo system, there are lots of really good receivers and record players to choose from, but very few speakers that hold up their all-important end of the system. Which is why some systems wind up sounding less impressive at home than they did in the advertisement.

We sell The Smaller Advent Loudspeaker because it turns this situation upside down. Not only do a pair of Smaller Advents sound as good as you (and we) had hoped, but well beyond unreasonable expectations. There is just nothing remotely like them.

The Smaller Advents were designed to sound as good in every respect, including frequency bandwidth, as any speakers of any price. Test reports in both High Fidelity and Stereo Review magazines agree that their response and overall performance would be noteworthy in any speaker, regardless of size or cost.

To understand just how much of a difference these speakers make in what you actually can hear for your money, come in and listen to the systems we've built around a pair of them.

Manawa teacher talks scheduled to start soon

MANAWA —Negotiations between the Manawa Education Association and the Little Wolf School District Board of Education are expected to get under way March 5 when the two groups will meet at 8 p.m. in the board room.

The MEA negotiating team, headed by Mike Lemke, had contacted the school board requesting that the school board present the MEA team with the board's proposal concerning salaries for the 1974-75 school year before the first meeting.

The school board has set Feb. 19 to draw up the proposal and to consider the 1974-75 school calendar presented by Dr. Robert G. Ames, superintendent, at Tuesday's board meeting.

Two calendar proposals were given to the school board, both with 180 days taught plus seven days for in-service, orientation, parent-teacher confernces, and semester breaks plus one holiday. Vacation days during the school year total 19, but are not part of the total 187 days.

The school board also voted to send four representatives to the negotiation workshop sponsored by the New London School Board at 6:30 p.m. Feb. 20 at Don's Supper Club. James Loughrin, Carl Preuss, Dr. Elvin K. Prather and Ames will attend.

The school board also agreed to attend the Wisconsin Association of School Board's dinner meeting with their wives on March 18 at Appleton. Dr. Barbara Thompson, state superintendent of public instruction, will speak.

Subtle discrimination?

MADISON, Wis. (AP) —About five years ago, the University of Wisconsin football team held its annual post-season banquet. To the surprise of the coaching staff, the 17 black players on the squad did not show up.

Grievances of the blacks were later aired, and changes were instituted.

But the attitude toward blacks on UW teams has not been quite the same since.

The next fall, only three blacks, including future star tailback Rufus "Roadrunner" Ferguson, were on the 55-member freshman football squad.

The number of blacks on the UW basketball team also fluctuated, and this season only two are on the 17-man squad.

Some blacks now feel the university may be discriminating against blacks in its recruiting efforts because of the unity they displayed in voicing their grievances in the late 1960s.

The suggestion is flatly denied by Athletic Director Elroy Hirsch, Football Coach John Jardine, Basketball Coach John Powless, and UW Athletic Board Chairman Frederick Haberman.

Mel Reddick, a bluechip prep athlete out of Chicago's Morgan Park in 1965 who later starred at Wisconsin, participated in the football dinner boycott in 1968.

One of the reasons for the protest was to get the UW to hire black counselors for black athletes. Reddick, now a UW law student, holds one of those counselor positions.

The 1968 team was plagued by far more than dissention caused by complaints of blacks. Coach John Coatta had just completed his second year at the helm and was 0-19-1. He was fired after the next season after compiling a 3-26-1 record.

Reddick said he believes the UW, whether consciously or not, has failed to utilize its black athletes fully in its recruitment efforts.

"Whether it's a subtle discrimination is hard to tell," Reddick said in an interview. "Since 1968, everything's been somewhat downhill for the black athlete at Wisconsin. It's kind of frightening."

Haberman insists he has never heard Hirsch or anyone else in the athletic department advise Jardine or Powless "how to recruit, whom to recruit or where to recruit."

Hirsch branded as "ridiculous" the suggestion that Wisconsin might be deliberately overlooking star black prep athletes.

Hirsch said all his coaches "want the best teams they can get and they can't have good teams without the material."

"We use all our athletes recruiting —black and white," he asserted.

One reason Wisconsin has had difficulty attracting outstanding black athletes, he said, is that unlike Ohio, Michigan and Illinois, Wisconsin lacks cities the size of Chicago, Detroit and Cleveland and their large black populations.

Jardine and Hirsch said Wisconsin, which has traditionally recruited heavily in Chicago, is now moving into the Detroit area.

Powless said his former starting center, Al Henry, now a top scorer in the Eastern League, is on the alert for basketball players in the Philadelphia area who might want to attend Wisconsin.

Lamont Weaver, one of the two black members of this year's team, said if there id discrimination against black recruits, he does not believe Powles can be blamed.

"He has to listen to the alumni," Weaver said. "There's politics involved."

Prof. James Jones, a member of the UW law faculty and the UW Athletic Board, and the first black to serve on either, said Reddick perhaps is correct in asserting that blacks should be used to a greater extent in recruiting efforts.

But, Jones said, the "real advances" will be made when Wisconsin has more blacks engaged fulltime in the administrative end of athletics.

Jones, who attended the then all black Lincoln University in Jefferson City, Mo., in the 1940s, said schools must be ready to compete for the top black athletes if they want winning programs.

"Was it startling that Michigan and Ohio State, when they played for the Big Ten championship last fall, each had a starting black quarterback?" Jones asked.

Sabres win despite long stick call

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

Rocky Farr tends goal and carries a big stick —about an eighth of an inch too big.

It cost him $200 —but it cost the Los Angeles Kings a game.

Farr, in the Buffalo nets Thursday night, faced 26 Los Angeles shots and let two of them in. But they were too little too late and the Sabres came away with a 4-2 National Hockey League victory.

In other NHL games, the New York Rangers and Philadelphia Flyers tied 4-4 and the New York Islanders and St. Louis Blues tied 2-2. In the World Hockey Association, the Toronto Toros beat the Jersey Knights 5-2 and the Quebec Nordiques downed the Chicago Cougars 5-3.

"It looked to me like a big stick all through the game," said Kings Coach Bob Pulford, "but I thought I'd wait until the proper time to protest."

That time came with about nine minutes to play and Buffalo already leading 3-1. The Sabres' Mike Robitaille had just been penalized for highsticking. Then Pulford went for the big-sticking call.

He asked for a measurement of the blade on Farr's stick. The officials obliged —and said it was within the legal limits.

But Terry Harper, the Kings' captain, said the problem lay with the officials' equipment. It was outdated, he said.

The officials decided he was right and used a device graciously provided by the Kings. This time the blade was too big, Farr was fined $200 and, more important for the Kings, Buffalo was socked with a second penalty, served by Doug Rombough.

Rangers 4, Flyers 4

Third-period goals by Rick MacLeish, Simon Nolet and Bill Barber enabled Philadelphia to tie the Rangers. Steve Vickers, Bobby Rousseau and Pete Stemkowski connected for New York in the first period and the Rangers carried a 4-1 lead into the final period.

Islanders 2, Blues 2

Ed Westfall's goal midway in the second period enabled the Islanders to tie the Blues. His 14th goal was a bullet which broke the stick of goalie Wayne Stephenson and bounded into the net.

Nordiques 5, Cougars 3

Rejean Giroux, playing in his first WHA game of the season, gave Quebec a 4-1 lead at 13:09 of the third period by batting in a flying puck and the Nordiques held on to down the Cougars.

NHL purchases Seals

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) —Charles O. Finley hinted he turned a profit by selling his hockey team, the Seals, then returned to the arbitration table where his Oakland A's baseball players are seeking more money.

"I still think hockey is a great sport," the Chicago insurance millionaire said Thursday after the California Golden Seals were turned over to the National Hockey League for more than $6 million.

The team was a loser, both on the ice and at the box office, in 3½ years of Finley ownership. The Seals, who left Oakland today to start a road trip, are last in the NHL Western Division and averaging only 5,000 fans per home game.

Finley bought the team in 1970 for a reported $4.5 million. He said he was "completely satisfied" with the amount he received from the NHL.

Finley discussed the sale, which had been pending for two months, at a news conference after A's captain and third baseman Sal Bando argued over the arbitration table why he should receive $100,000 for the coming baseball season.

Ted Kubiak's hearing was held Thursday afternoon. The cases of Gene Tenace, Joe Rudi and Reggie Jackson, three stars of the world championship team, are scheduled between today and next Tuesday.

Finley, who suffered a heart attack last summer, has been advised by doctors to sell all his sports teams. He still owns the American Basketball Association Memphis Tams, as well as the A's.

Finley said his main concern when he bought the Seals was to make sure the team stayed in the San Francisco Bay Area. The NHL, whether it continues to maintain the team itself or sells to another party, also intends to keep the franchise in the area.

Skiing outlook

By CHUCK TORINUS

Temperature levels are lower and new snow accumulations are small this week, but all in all skiing should be reasonably good for Fox Cities skiers over the weekend.

Two ski areas in Michigan's Upper Peninsula lead popular hills in this part of the Midwest with three inches of new snow. Both Brule Mountain and Cliff's Ridge are offering excellent conditions because of the added powder. They are joined by Pine Mountain with two inches and Indianhead Mountain with an inch. "Very good" skiing is available at Porcupine Mountain and Big Powderhorn Mountain, also in the U.P.

Of the hills reporting in Wisconsin, Mt. Telemark is the only one offering excellent skiing with an inch of new over a 20-26 inch base. "Very good" and conditions can be enjoyed at Hidden Valley, View Ridge, Rib Mountain, and Camp 10.

Weekend outdoors outlook

Snow conditions for downhill and cross-country skiing are good to excellent across the state, and the snowmobile trails on state-owned lands should provide many miles of scenic riding this weekend, according to the Department of Natural Resources (DNR).

Ice fishing has generally been less than spectacular, but there are some bright spots. Around Madeline Island in Lake Superior, several 8-10 pound lake trout have been taken, and perch are biting in Chequamegon bay, particularly east of Ashland in Ashland county. However, ice conditions in the Apostle Islands area are unpredictable, and extreme care must be taken when traveling on the Lake Superior ice.

Further south in the Hayward area of Sawyer county, panfish are biting in Big Wood Lake and Lake Chetac. In north central Wisconsin, ice fishing in the Woodruff area is listed as fair, though walleyes have been caught in the Willow Flowage and Lake Tomahawk in Oneida county, and catches of panfish have been taken in Lake Tomahawk, the Minocqua thoroughfare, Carroll lake, Big Bear Skin lake, Minocqua lake and Lower Kaubashine lake also in Oneida county.

Around Antigo in Langlade county, perch and walleyes are biting in the Eau Pleine Flowage, Marathon county, and panfish are biting at Sawyer and Rolling Stone lakes in Langlade county.

In Oconto county, bluegill fishing is good on most of the small lakes, walleye action is fair on Archibald, Kelly and White potato lakes, and northern pike fishing is good on Chute pond and the Townsend flowage. Ice fishing continues to be good on Shawano lake in Shawano county, where the fishing pressure is high and good catches of pike are being taken.

Along Lake Michigan, panfish and perch are biting on Bullhead, Long, Hartlaub's and English lakes in Manitowoc county. In the Lake Winnebago area, walleye fishing on Winnebago's east shore is slow, but walleye and sauger action is picking up along the west shore. In Waupaca county, northerns are hitting on the cutoff in the Chain O' Lakes, and walleyes are being caught on the Wolf river in the New London area. Panfishing is best on the Upper Chain O' Lakes and White lake.

LAKE MICHIGAN DISTRICT

Oshkosh Area:

Calumet county — Walleye fishing on the east shore of Lake Winnebago is slow, but snowmobiling is good.

Fond du Lac county — Fishing in most county lakes is poor. All the snowmobile trails in the Kettle Moraine are open.

Winnebago county — Walleye and sauger fishing is picking up in the west shore of Lake Winnebago, and some limits are being taken. Snowmobile conditions are excellent.

Wautoma Area:

Snowmobiling conditions are good throughout the area, with the addition of some more snow. All trails are open.

Green Lake county — A few lake trout are being taken on Big Green lake, with minnows as bait. Most of the lakes are still unsafe for car travel. Puckaway lake continues to produce some good catches of large walleyes and northern pike.

Waupaca county — Some northerns are hitting on the cutoff in the Chain O'Lakes. Walleyes are being caught on the Wolf river in the New London area, and panfishing is best on the Upper Chain O'Lakes and White lake.

Marinette Area:

Florence county — Ice fishing is generally slow, but snowmobiling is excellent.

Marinette county — Ice fishing has picked up during the past week on most of the lakes. Caldron falls is reported to be the "hot spot" for crappies. Snowmobiling is excellent.

Oconto county — Bluegills are hitting on most of the small lakes, and walleye fishing is fair on Archibald, Kelly and White Potato lakes. There is good northern pike fishing on Chute pond and the Townsend flowage and snowmobiling is very good.

Shawano county — Ice fishing continues to be good on Shawano lake. The pressure is high and there are good catches of northerns being taken. Snowmobiling is good.

Antigo Area:

Perch and walleye are biting in the Eau Pleine flowage in Marathon county, and panfish are hitting at Sawyer and Rolling Stone lakes in Langlade county. Trout have been caught in Moose and Florence lakes, Langlade county. Snowmobiling and cross-country skiing conditions are good.

Woodruff Area:

Fishing was only fair in the Lakeland area last weekend. Some walleyes, northerns and crappies were taken in the Willow flowage, Oneida county, and occasional walleyes were caught in Lake Tomahawk, Oneida county. Fair catches of panfish have been taken in Lake Tomahawk, the Minocqua thoroughfare, Carroll lake, Big Bear Skin lake, Minocqua lake, and Lower Kaubashine lakes, Oneida county, as well as Big Arbor Vitae and Gunlock lakes in Vilas county. Snowmobile use was very heavy on the lakes and trails in Oneida, Forest and Vilas counties.

NORTHWEST DISTRICT

Brule Area:

Take extreme care when traveling on the ice in the Apostle Islands area. Ice conditions change from day to day, and the ice around Madeline Island is unpredictable. Fishing is picking up in Papumky bay, and on Madeline Island several 8 to 10-pound lake trout have been taken. Perch fishing in Chequamegon bay is good, particularly east of Ashland. There are 20 inches of ice on most inland lakes, covered by 4 to 6 inches of snow. Some lakes have several layers of ice, water and slush. Generally, fishing pressure has been slow on lakes in the Brule area. Bluegill fishing has been fair on the Gordon flowage, but some fair catches of crappies were taken on Amnicon lake. Snowmobiling is good in the area with 14 to 18 inches of snow on the ground.

NEW YORK (AP) —Dave Davis can afford a 185.

The 31-year-old southpaw from Atlanta saved his worst for last but can't be too concerned since he holds a commanding 309 pin lead as the final eight-game segment gets underway today in the $85,000 BPAA U.S. Open Bowling Tournament.

Davis rolled a 185 after stringing together seven earlier games of 248, 247, 236, 226, 255, 264 and 226 for a total pin fall of 1887 to lead the 24 survivors, cut from an original field of 240.

Davis, who hasn't won a tour title in over four years, built on an earlier 87 pin lead which he established after 32 games. He has totaled 9397 pins since play began last Monday, including 30 bonus pins for each head-to-head victory.

The smooth-rolling Davis was 6-2 in direct competition in Thursday's matches.

Earl Anthony, Tacoma, Wash., moved from ninth place to second on the strength of a 226, 217, 232, 278, 248, 288, 196, and 266 series. Anthony also showed a 6-2 mark but knocked down 64 more pins than Davis.

Anthony, with seven career PBA victories, was at 9088, 57 pins ahead of Dick Weber, the St. Louis pro who holds 24 PBA titles in a 15-year career. Weber went 4-4 in his eight games and with 1680 pins fell one notch in the standings.

Rick Rettler stirs the Italian spaghetti sauce as the first annual food fair gets underway during American Field Service (AFS) week at Appleton High School-West. Held Tuesday evening, this event included tasty foreign foods, displays and dances from the countries of Appleton's AFS students and from our own Americans Abroad students.

Proper food storage can pay

BENTON HARBOR, Mich. —Being a wise food shopper is just a start in dealing with rising food costs. You should also cultivate the storage instincts of a squirrel.

Provide your home with enough cold storage space to adequately preserve fresh and frozen grocery items. And, keep both the refrigerator- freezer compartments and separate freezer cold enough to do the job of maintaining quality and flavor.

Yet when setting the controls, how cold is cold enough? In the refrigerator's fresh food section, a simple answer is when milk is very cold to drink. In the freezer or freezer compartment, ice cream should be firm.

Keep all foods covered. Cold air is drier than warm air so food will dry out when not covered.

Refrigerator-freezer and freezer space, like closet space, should be organized so you know what's on the shelf. Foods that get shoved to the back of the shelf and lost will have to be thrown out, increasing waste.

Fresh food should be stored ready for the table. Fruits and vegetables can be washed and ready to eat. Leafy vegetables in particular need high humidity storage, and washing adds needed moisture. Then wrap them in plastic or store in a sealed crisper.

Meat, vegetables, in fact, almost everything keeps better and longer at lower temperatures, and it may take a modern no-frost refrigerator-freezer to maintain uniform, low temperature. The system that makes it no-frost has more capacity for cooling and spreads the cold air uniformly.

In this era of frozen foods, if you still have a manual defrost freezer compartment, you should be aware that you really do not have a freezer. Instead it's just a compartment to hold frozen foods for a short while. A refrigerator-freezer is a big factor in food bills: a too warm, too small refrigerator can increase the number of necessary store trips each week, wasting both time and gasoline.

For long range food storage, a separate freezer is ideal. It stores food "specials" and holds leftovers so food can be used later. Yet, there should be a steady turnover in and out of the unit to make it profitable.

So how does your cold storage space compare to the size recommended for a family of four? Based on surveys made with selected homemakers, home economists at Whirlpool Corp., have made the following minimum recommendations. Fill in this table and look at the results.

	YOURS
Refrigerator-Freezer
Fresh food section cu. ft.
Frozen food section cu. ft.
Total size cu. ft.
Separate freezer cu. ft.
MINIMUM RECOMMENDATIONS
11-12 cu. ft.
4-5 cu. ft.

If your totals are less than those recommended, you may not have adequate space to plan, but and store food efficiently.

Dentist puts bite on criminals

By MICHAEL BARTHOLOMEW

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — When Lester Luntz isn't filling cavities, he's putting the bite on criminals.

Outside his Hartford dentist's office Dr. Luntz is a pioneer in forensic (court) dentistry. Working with dental records, Luntz has made over 370 positive identifications of 400 bodies. And evidence from his labs has brought criminals to justice.

Last year in Du Page County, Ill., for example, Luntz identified an impression of the upper teeth of a murder suspect. It matched a bite mark on the victim's leg, and the suspect was convicted.

In 1970 four members of a New Canaan, Conn., family were found brutally slain in their home. The weapons bore no fingerprints, nor were there signs of a forced entry.

Luntz identified a bite mark on a girl's left breast as belonging to her brother. Although the youth was found not guilty by reason of insanity, Luntz said the case pioneered the use of tooth prints in criminal cases.

The FBI reported a case in which a burglar chewed on some cheese while plying his trade. When confronted with a model of his bent teeth taken from the cheese, the burglar confessed, Luntz said.

The case for dentistry in criminal identification is strong. Teeth, jaws and fillings can produce over 2½ billion different impressions, Luntz said. "It can be safely assumed that no two mouths are identical."

And the human tooth, while extensively attacked by diseases in life, is the least destructible portion of the human body after death.

Luntz's arguments for dental identification were put to the test in June 1971 when an Allegheny Airlines plane crashed near Tweed-New Haven, Conn., Airport, killing 28 of the 31 persons aboard.

Twenty-seven bodies were burned beyond recognition and fingerprint identification was impossible. The Connecticut Dental Disaster Squad, a group of 18 volunteer dentists organized by Luntz in 1969, was called in.

Using the airline passenger list and the victims' dental records, the dentists in two days identified all 28 bodies.

Luntz uses sophisticated photographic equipment in his dental identification work. In Portland, Conn., Luntz was asked to identify a female skeleton thought to be a missing 20-year-old. The girl's family couldn't supply a dental record, but had a number of photographs. He examined her protrusive front teeth and concluded that the skeleton was not the missing girl.

Luntz's work has qualified him as a police surgeon with the Connecticut state police, and deputy sheriff in Pima County, Ariz., a title he shares proudly with Wyatt Earp.

Abroad, Luntz has worked with Japanese, Hong Kong, British, Scottish, Belgian, Swiss and Puerto Rican police departments.

Between traveling and his office work, Luntz and his wife Phyllis wrote the first textbook on the techniques of forensic dentistry, "A Handbook for Dental Identification."

Neenah club goes on stage at opera

BY SALLY NELSON
Post-Crescent staff writer

NEENAH — "If you came to hear all about the opera because I'm an authority, you are wasting your time. I'm an authority on where I live and on my work, and I live in New York and the Metropolitan Opera is "the city" where I work," Henry Butler told Tuesday Club members this week at a meeting at the Boys Brigade Building.

"The Met," Butler, one of the stage directors explained, is a "city within a city" with 1,200 inhabitants. It differs from other small cities in that it has eight wig makers, 26 tailors and 48 cleaning ladies. However, in their concern for one another, the residents of "the city" are much like that of any small community, he said.

In this way, the Metropolitan Opera is similar to ones throughout the world, Butler said, and he added that when he worked at the Weisbaden Opera House in Germany just after World War II, members of the company even posted their own guards to protect "their city" from looting.

There are almost always 98 to 100 visitors to "my city," Butler said, and they have one thing in common. "They all sing."

Butler said he came to "the city" in 1961 when he was asked to direct "Girl of the Golden West."

That was after the offer had been made to five other directors and they were desperate, Butler added.

Butler explained there are three kinds of productions including new ones, revivals, and "blow-the-dust-offs." He devoted almost all of his time on new productions since revivals require far less time and "blow-the-dust-off" operas are barely rehearsed, leaving much of the chance of success to a competent chorus.

A good chorus is a "walking library," said Butler. A director will rely on members, asking them to show what they have done before and then making only minute changes. Older chorus members instruct younger ones.

Leading singers are necessarily booked far in advance for new productions. The next step is choosing a scenery designer who must be seen many times before preliminary sketches are made. In this way the feeling of the opera can be interpreted.

Directors and designers are practical, said Butler, and he disclaimed the rumor that great sums are wasted. All schedules are studied so there are no waiting times since large crews must be paid, and wasted time is wasted money.

Butler explained that a director goes by the score, listening to it by the hour. A good director can hear the composer "talking," hear when there should be motion on stage and when there should be silence.

"Mozart can tell you what to do; you can hear it."

Butler said he does not believe in using innovations in presenting classics such as "La Boheme" that takes place in a certain time and at a certain place in history. Opera can be moved if you don't disturb the base, he said, but masterpieces don't need pepping up.

The work of a stage director is that of an explainer, or guide, Butler said, and added that his natural talent for directing first showed up when he interpreted directions from teachers for his fellow kindergarten classmates.

After the stage director and set designer have decided upon scenery, the plan must be presented to the director of the opera company. Butler said that Sir Bing had no visual sense, and at one time he had a college art student interpret his ideas for him before presenting them to the famous man.

After "lots of homework," stage meetings include all representatives from all branches of opera production, including costumes, choreography, and offices. Rehearsals must be planned around the stars because they are paid only for performances and are therefore not anxious to rehearse. Chorus members and stage hands are paid by the hour.

"The logistics for an opera are like those of moving an army on D-Day," Butler said. Rehearsals begin on a secondary stage. Later, they are coordinated and moved to "the largest operatic stage in the world."

Butler said the first time on the big stage is terrifying. It is the custom to introduce new directors to the hundreds he will be working with and then he hears the words, "The stage is yours."

The director said he attempts to quickly learn the names of all of the members of the chorus so he can call them by name and save valuable time.

No first-rate performer ever comes to the opera unprepared, Butler said. They may be bullheaded, stubborn or temperamental, but they are never stupid. He praised the great stars, saying their voices are the world's finest, most delicate instruments. A good operatic star respects and cares for voice and health.

Because in an opera house of any size music cannot be heard from all parts of the stage, prompters are necessary. Also, "thank God for contact lenses," Butler said, "as I believe nine-tenths of all singers are blind as bats."

During the final week before opening curtain, piano dress rehearsals are conducted to iron out final problems. Full orchestra dress rehearsals follow. There always is a day between final rehearsal and opening so performers can rest. Operatic singing requires enormous physical ouput, Butler said.

The stage director's contract ends the day of dress rehearsal and he is not even required to attend the opening... but Butler does. An assistant takes over, and it would be unlikely that the director would be called back, even if the opera runs a long time.

Butler talked about "the ladies and gentlemen" he deals with. Robert Merrill may have been happier as a baseball player after all, he joked. Once Merrill has learned to perform an action, it is almost impossible to re-educate him to do it differently, he said.

He told of "the saints" among operatic stars, including Franco Corelli and Dorothy Kirsten. He mentioned the almost heroic efforts of Montserrat Caballe, who went through with a scene requiring her to drop to her knees, even though it caused her great pain due to earlier leg injuries.

At the "old Met" and the new one in Lincoln Center, Butler has worked with many of the "greats," including Richard Tucker, Joan Sutherland, Tito Gobbi, James McCracken, Eleanor Steber, Regina Resnik, Leontyne Price and many more.

Most men agree, it's better to hold queen

BY ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Which would you rather hold —a king or a queen? Most of the men I know would agree that it's better to hold a queen, and I won't argue with them. In fact, this hand proves it.

Opening lead – ♠ 5

Declarer won the first trick in dummy with the ace of spades and returned a diamond to finesse with the jack. West won with the queen of diamonds and shifted to the ten of hearts.

South won with the ace of hearts and led the king of diamonds. East took the ace of diamonds and led the queen of hearts to dummy's king.

Hence South could make only one diamond trick. Down one.

Now make a change in the South hand. Take away the king of diamonds and put the queen of diamonds in its place.

When West leads the five of spades you aren't tempted to play dummy's ace. You win with the king of spades and lead the queen of diamonds.

Somebody wins and leads a heart. You win with the ace of hearts and lead the jack of diamonds to force out the ace. When dummy's king of hearts is knocked out, you can cash the ten of diamonds and get back to dummy with the ace of spades to cash the nine of diamonds as your ninth trick.

Of course you should win the first trick in your own hand with the original cards; and then you should lead the king of diamonds. The trouble is that this requires thought. You don't need to think if you're holding a queen.

ANSWER. Bid one spade. The hand is just barely worth a response. Show the major suit rather than bid one notrump. The response of one in a suit gives more information and promises no greater strength.

Introductions

Mary personifies 'Alice'

BY SANDRA SHACKELFORD
Post-Crescent staff writer

Mary A. Hopkins personifies the "all you will become" section of the Alice in Dairyland brochure.

Headquartered at the Conway Motor Inn this week the current Alice in Dairyland was doing her best to promote the state's annual Department of Agriculture sponsored contest. She related what it has meant to her personally to be a spokeswoman for the dairy industry.

The brochure states that "Alice" will become one of Wisconsin's best known young women." She has become that. "...experienced in all phases of public relations." She does well. "...familiar with Wisconsin's internationally famous food industry telling its story throughout the state and nation." She leaves no doubt that she "likes it here." "...acquainted with many of the nations' business, civic and governmental leaders." Says Mary, "All of the famous people I've met are famous for their personalities in their own right."

The brochure didn't let on to her unflinching ability to be candid.

Her experience as industry's public relations person has prepared her for business. Constant speaking engagements have given her polish beyond her years.

Named Alice in Dairyland last June 15, Mary already has logged between 50,000 and 60,000 miles in her travels. As good will ambassadress she's told audiences how to use the state's dairy products with flair.

"People are looking for the best nutritional value for the money," she offered, when asked if prohibitive prices will cause a decline in cheese sales.

One of the hints she willingly offers for handy homemakers includes a cheese based fudge which is mixed in the hands and can be kept in the refrigerator from three to four months.

After promoting cheese in some areas, she explained, sales soared 300 per cent. She envisions no threat to the state's industry from imported products basing her judgement both on population growth and demand.

"We intend to provide the needed market for cheese."

While many state programs are being cut back during a year of skyrocketing inflation, Mary affirmed that some consideration has been given to abandoning the Department of Agriculture promotion which pays her $8,200 a year.

"They received such overwhelming positive response that they decided against it," she offered.

The University of Wisconsin-Eau Claire student, whose future includes work with retarded children, doesn't consider herself to be an usual human commodity.

Rather, "I'm someone who has gone through life very blessed. I want to give what I have to other people."

Her faith in God has been a constant affirmation of how she feels about herself and about others. If she has personal appeal, "It's derived from my sense of Christianity."

Mary is often asked political questions. But she strives to set aside her own persuasions for her promotional work. "You don't promote yourself," she stated. "You promote Wisconsin.

"People see me as representing their opinions," she cautioned. "I don't believe in using the media to push my own views."

There are changes she would like to see made in the annual Alice in Dairyland program.

"I'd like to have the public more informed," she explained, stressing the positive aspects of a program she feels offers a means of attaining personal growth and experience.

It's been quite a year for the young Wisconsin woman who will relinquish her PR role June 15. As Mary puts it, "You pack a lot of growing up into one year."

Ann Landers

Leave those dials alone, kids

Dear Ann Landers: I am a 74-year-old reader, male, and have been wanting to write to you for about a year. I asked my neighbor if she thought I should and she said, "Wait a few months and some other nut will write in with the same problem." Well, I've been waiting and nobody has—so here it is:

I have 12 grandchildren and four great-grandchildren. God bless them. They like to come to Grandpa's house and I enjoy having them. But my dear wife passed on in 1971 and the housekeeper can't see very well, or she doesn't want to. Anyway, Ann, I have a secret complaint against these kids and I am going to let them read it in the paper. They never miss your column.

I keep the air conditioning and the heat adjusted the way I like it. When they come in they fiddle with the thermostat and upset the temperature. Then they monkey with my TV and get it out of focus. My radio is set to the station I enjoy, but they change it to a rock station. My typewriter is busted, which is why I am writing this by hand.

I don't need to sign my name. They know who I am. Thanks, Ann.—Gramps

Dear Gramps: So much for your appliances. Are your vocal cords also out of commission?

If your young relatives are steady readers they will see themselves here today. But why do so many of you want me to do your dirty work? Speak up, Gramps.

Dear Ann Landers: You have made plenty of trouble for me and I want you to know it. It's hard enough to be a step-mother—now I've got double trouble because Ann Landers says, "A high school student should be able to date if she is dependable and has a sense of responsibility."

My step-daughter is in high school. She is only 14 but has the body of an 18-year-old. The problem is she has the mind of a 10-year-old. We have told her no dating in cars until she is 16. All hell broke out around here when your column appeared.

Thanks for nothing.—Reader From The Old School

Dear O.S.: Go back and read my advice again. Then read it to your step daughter. I said a high school girl who has integrity and record of dependabiltity should be permitted to date. According to your letter, that child has neither. You're on solid ground, Mother. Don't let her beat you down.

Dear Ann Landers: Recently you ran a letter from a guy who enjoys dressing up in women's clothes. He complained that the mail-order catalogues (his best source) don't show anythimg feminine because the dames in this country have gone nutty over pants, mannish shirts, denim and suede. He can't order anything in silk or chiffon with ruffles and frills and he's not getting his kicks.

Your advice was, "Buy the fabrics yourself and find a seamstress who can keep her mouth shut."

It's people like you who make trouble for people like us. By suggesting that he find a seamstress who can "keep her mouth shut" you plant the idea that there is something evil about a man wearing feminine apparel in the privacy of his own home. If I (and millions of others) enjoy it, whom does it hurt? You owe us all an apology. Another Way

Dear Way: O.K. I apologize. Buy your own fabrics and find a seamstress with a big mouth.

The plight of service station operators

BY ARLEN BOARDMAN
Post-Crescent staff writer

The chances of a massive gasoline station shutdown similar to the recent truckers' protest appear unlikely, but many stations are reducing hours and have less gasoline to sell because of the lower allociation to Wisconsin.

Also, while some stations have adequate supplies and profit margins, others say they are barely existing under the present circumstances and cannot continue much longer.

Ed Piche, president of the Brown County Gasoline Retailers Association, said today that he expected a massive shutdown possibly by Monday, if appropriate people didn't start listening to the complaints of the station operators.

He said operators are demanding that Phase 4 price controls be eliminated and that the major oil companies be investigated thoroughly to bring about fairer distribution and pricing of gasoline.

Piche said the first indication of support sought will be sympathy for the plight from "a senate committee" which Art C. Johnson, executive vice president of the Retail Gasoline Dealers Association of Wisconsin, was to testify before this morning.

Johnson was en route to Madison this morning and couldn't be reached, but he said Thursday night in Green Bay that although there was talk of a total shutdown of stations, this was not being encouraged by the association.

A spot check of Fox Cities stations this morning indicated that a massive shutdown without association endorsement was highly unlikely.

Jack Zentner, Oshkosh, state association president, said there was only a "slight possibility of closing," but he said the directors were meeting Monday in Madison and would discuss the situation. He said the goal was primarily to awaken the public to the plight of the station operators.

"We're not trying to hurt the public; we are the public," he said. "We're fighting the government."

Zentner warned that the problems of the fuel industry would take their toll in other areas, such as the food industry, in jobs in many phases of the economy and in prices in many areas. The problem is intertwined in other economic problems of the nation, he said.

Clarence VanderPutten, president of the Fox Cities Retail Gasoline Dealers Association, explained the financial bind that some stations are in. With many stations down to receiving about 80 per cent of the gasoline allocation of 1972, they are receiving about 20 per cent less income, assuming that they still are maintaining the normal profit margin on a gallon of gasoline.

VanderPutten estimated that a station operator earns $10,000 to $12,000 a

Gunman gets drugs from store

Several ounces of narcotic drugs in injectable, powder and tablet forms were taken in an armed robbery of the Ford Rexall Drug Store, 322 W. College Ave., just before 6:30 p.m. Thursday.

No shots were fired and no injuries resulted, although the robber took an 18-year-old female clerk as a hostage for a short time after he obtained the drugs.

Police were continuing their search today for the suspect, described as "clean-looking" and in his 20s.

Police gave these details of the robbery:

The man entered the store and browsed in the aisles, declining help from the clerk.

After several minutes, he went to the rear counter, where the clerk was assisting the only other customer, an Appleton woman who was having a prescription filled.

The man then pulled out a long barreled pistol and pushed the customer behind the counter, where he ordered her and the clerk to get down onto the floor. He said he didn't want to hurt anyone.

The robber ordered the druggist to give him the morphine, codeine and other hard drugs. While the druggist was getting the items from a storage cabinet, the robber became impatient and ordered him to hurry and give him everything.

The drugs were placed in a paper bag by the robber, who then took the clerk with him as a hostage. He told the druggist to wait five minutes before he called anyone, a statement similar to that used by a robber who took $50 in narcotics at Morton's Drug Store in Neenah last Saturday.

After the two were outside, they climbed a small embankment by the rear alley and walked across the post office parking lot to Washington Street, where the robber instructed the clerk to walk east. He walked rapidly west.

The girl spotted a police squad car a short distance away and summoned the officer, who radioed an alert to other officers.

The witnesses told police the robber appeared nervous and that he may have been under the influence of drugs at the time. He also took a box of poison, but at no time demanded any money.

A spokesman for the store said the exact losses would not be determined until the completion of an inventory, probably Saturday.

The robber, believed to have been armed with a .45 caliber pistol, was described as about 6 feet tall, with a slim build, narrow face, dark eyes and brown hair. He was wearing a green quilted ski jacket, red gloves and baggy blue jeans.

Fremont span prompts petitions, stand-by plan

BY VIRGINIA SCHMIDT
Post-Crescent correspondent

FREMONT — The long wait for construction to begin on the village's new bridge and the dilapidated condition of the old span have prompted local citizens and officials to take action in two areas:

- A petition is being circulated in an attempt to hasten construction of the new span.
- Standards for operating procedures for "unsafe bridge" or "bridge out" conditions have been adopted by the village emergency center, the fire department.

Not only signatures of village residents appear on the petitions. Traffic on the U.S. 10 bridge represents travelers from a wide section of the Fox River Valley.

The petitions urge replacement of the bridge "at the earliest possible moment."

The petition reads:

"We deem the bridge to be unsafe and in danger of imminent failure. We feel the bridge is of insufficient width to permit vehicles to pass safely on it. In the event of an anticipated failure, the rerouting of traffic would produce great inconvenience and difficulty for the traveling public."

Tentative plans are to send the signed petitions to area legislative representatives in Madison and Washington and to other officials.

The construction of the new bridge has been discussed for many years. The project was taken off the state priority list in November, 1969. Three years later, it was announced that construction would start in the summer of 1974. But rumors again are causing concern over the present priority listing and available funding.

Because of the condition of the present span and concern for the safety of anyone traveling over or under it, standards for operating procedures in the event of an emergency have been adopted by the fire department.

Fire Chief Gordon Puls and assistant chiefs David Kinsman and Robert Kramer are in charge of setting the plan, suggested by Vern Johnson, emergency government director, into action.

Should a bridge failure arise, Johnson, the Waupaca County Sheriff's Department, the Waupaca County Highway Department and the Corps of Engineers, Appleton, will be notified.

Both approaches to the bridge would be barricaded and standy-by personnel would be assigned until law enforcement officers and highway personnel arrive.

Persons needing emergency hospitalization or other care when "bridge out" or "unsafe bridge" conditions exist have been instructed which ambulance service to contact, depending on which side of the river they live on. Cline Hanson Ambulance will handle calls on the north side, Lewin Ambulance will handle calls on the south side.

Communications posts on the north side will be manned by Dale Luedtke and Peter Lantvit. Those on the south side will be handled by David Kinsman and Robert Kramer.

Holiday limits Appleton post office activities

The U. S. Postal Service will operate a reduced schedule of services in Appleton during the weekend before George Washington's birthday.

On Saturday and Sunday, regular weekend window and collection services will be observed.

On Monday, the federal holiday commemorating Presidents' Day, there will be no regular residential or business mail deliveries. Donald Schultz, officer in charge reported that window service will provided at the main office from 8 a.m. to noon. The carrier annex lobby will be open for box patrons from 8:45 to 10:45 a.m.

Changes in assessment plan rejected

BY FRANK CHURCH
Post-Crescent staff writer

A tape recorded telephone conversation helped Appleton's finance committee decide Thursday to reject an alderman's attempt to change the city's three-year reassessment program.

The vote was unanimous. It came after assertions from state Rep. William Rogers, D-Kaukauna, and Ald. Edward Maloney (9th) that the program might be illegal and should be changed.

City Atty. David Geenen called Rogers' charges "vague innuendos" and said, "There's no doubt in my mind that everything being done is legal and fair."

He called the charges leveled at the program and the proposals for changing it "ridiculous." He said Assessor George Schwarzbauer was "doing a pretty good job."

Schwarzbauer pulled out a tape recorder and transcriptions for the committee to show them that state Bureau of Property and Utility Taxes Director Glenn Holmes had told Rogers only that a proposed 2 per cent tax break for property owners in reassessed portions of the city might be illegal, not that the reassessment program itself was.

"I would, from my office in Madison without any investigation, have no way to determine that," said Holmes during the recording that was made with his consent earlier in the day.

Rogers had charged that Holmes had told him that the reassessment program might be illegal.

The playing of the tape highlighted a session that turned into a vote of confidence for the assessor and his reassessment efforts after weeks of controversy over the program he was carrying out.

Schwarzbauer said what "grabs him" the most about the publicity of the affair are the calls he's getting "from all over the city" from people criticizing him and the reassessment program. He said some have threatened not to allow his crews into their homes to reassess because they think what he's doing is illegal.

Maloney said he never charged that it was illegal, but he said it was unfair to taxpayers in his ward and elsewhere that had been physically reassessed in 1973 and — he claims — got higher assessments than other areas of the city which had their property values increased to a theoretical 100 per cent of full value by multiplying them by the set figure of 2.7027.

Rogers said from his Madison office today that he "wouldn't be a bit surprised" if dissatisfied property owners in newly assessed portions of the city started a taxpayers' suit challenging the reassessment effort if the finance committee's recommendation is endorsed by the council.

"I thought at least they would invite someone from the department to have a look," said Rogers, referring to what he said was willingness of Holmes' department to check out — if the city requested it — the reassessment program.

Geenen saw no reason for that. He was sure it was legal and fair. The committee agreed.

"No one's really decided what we're doing is not illegal," said Maloney today, adding that he didn't know if residents of his reassessed ward would file a taxpayers' suit. More checking would have to be done first, he said, because "it would be foolish to waste the money" if there were no legal

Bridge work starts Monday in Kaukauna

KAUKAUNA — Crews will begin tearing down the Wisconsin Avenue bridge Monday and, in the near future, all north-south traffic will be forced to use the Lawe Street bridge.

Heavy equipment of the Edward Kraemer and Sons Construction Co., Plain, is being moved into place at the southeast end of the bridge preparatory to beginning work Monday.

The firm submitted low bid of $319,940 for removal and replacement of the fixed portion of the Wisconsin Avenue bridge earlier this year. Original cost estimate for the project was $350,000 and at that time Outagamie County board members voted to appropriate $175,000 to assist the city in financing the project. It has not yet been determined whether the county will still give the city $175,000 or one-half the actual construction cost.

At a meeting of City Engineer Robert Natrop, representatives of Owen Ayres and Associates, Eau Claire, design engineers for the bridge, and representatives of the construction firm a tentative work schedule was worked out.

It was noted that work on removal of the existing span could extend into April, but that excavation for the new span could begin about mid-March and that concrete work for new bridge piers and abutments could start early in April.

Test borings made earlier show that the rock in the bottom of the river provides solid support for the span. Concrete work is expected to continue

Audit findings hold up bathroom fund request

Funds for bathroom construction at the Outagamie County Health Center, were not requested at last Tuesday's county board meeting because of unfavorable findings during a state audit of the institution, Supv. George Schroeder of Freedom told the Unified Health Services Board Thursday.

Schroeder is chairman of the county board's agriculture, education and human resources committee, which last week met with health center trustees and other county officials. It was agreed to ask the county board to free $15,000 of the $200,000 budgeted for bathroom construction so architectural work can begin.

Schroeder's committee and trustees have been trying for several months to get the controversial project started. Last week marked the fifth time the county board has either tabled the request or neglected to bring it up for discussion.

Proponents say the bathrooms are needed in six wings of the health center to allow for desegregation of men and women patients and permit fuller utilization of the facility.

Opponents argue that the Lake Winnebago Areawide Comprehensive Health Planning Council has not yet approved the $200,000 job. The council must pass on institution projects involving more than $100,000.

Some critics have said they will not vote for freeing the budgeted funds until Eugene K. Speener is removed as health center administrator.

Schroeder, in response to a question from John Wylie, Unified Health Services Board chairman, admitted he was ready last Tuesday to ask the board to provide the entire $200,000 instead of just the needed architect money, but changed his mind after he got his first look at the state Bureau of Municipal Audit's latest report on the health center.

Five unsatisfactory administrative practices were noted in the audit report for the 1972-73 fiscal year. The report was received by county officials Monday.

Auditors reported that many of Speener's travel and expense claims were not documented, that there was no supporting evidence on 30 vouchers drawn on the center's federal grant

Panel, mayor disagree on junkets

Appleton's Finance Committee, interpreting the mayor's travel policy for department heads differently than the mayor himself, has approved a trip to Las Vegas, Nev., for Director of Inspections Charles Magnette, at city expense.

The vote of the committee Thursday was 2-1. It follows a recommendation earlier this week by the welfare and ordinance committee that Magnette's expenses for the trip be covered up to one-half (not exceeding $185) by the city.

The two actions set the stage for a showdown on the council floor Wednesday.

Neither committee action has the effect of overriding Mayor James Sutherland's travel policy for department heads' which does not allow city-paid travels by department heads out of state except in "exceptional" cases.

Both committees felt Magnette's case was "exceptional." Sutherland — and Magnette himself — didn't think it was.

Magnette hoped the city would change the travel policy for department heads to allow for attendance at more out-of-state meetings and conventions.

"I don't agree with the policy, or I wouldn't be here," he told the finance committee Thursday.

Finance Director Reynold Running wondered if the city was ahead of other cities, noting that Appleton was not sending its finance director to another national convention (Finance Officers Association) this summer. It will also be in Las Vegas.

Magnette's convention is scheduled for March 9, 10 and 11.

Sutherland's policy allows department heads to pay their own way to an out-of-state meeting —something Police Chief Earl Wolff did last year —if they get the approval of the committee overseeing their department operations. It also allows for city financing of out-of-state attendance in exceptional cases, with the approval of the City Council.

"It's pretty hard to think of an exceptional case," Sutherland admitted to the committee Thursday. He constructed a hypothetical example, however, of a session that he said would be of "particular benefit" to the city on a specific problem it now faces.

Most often, Sutherland said, out-of-state conventions deal with general matters and do not benefit department heads. Often, they serve simply as junkets or vacations.

"Their value is so nebulous and relatively small that it doesn't justify the use of city funds," he said. In-state sessions, on the other hand, are of value to department heads, he said. His policy puts emphasis on encouraging attendance at in-state sessions.

Sutherland's policy was formulated in October, 1972. Magnette's case is the first conflict over its interpretation between aldermen and the mayor.

Ald. Donald Day (19th) said it was a "pretty fair policy" but called for a looser interpretation of "exceptional" so that the city doesn't "get too parochial in our thinking" because its

Foster care for patients studied

As many as 30 Outagamie County Health Center patients might be removed from the institution under a community group foster home proposal being considered by the county's Unified Health Services Board.

Mark DeBruin, the board's developmental disabilities coordinator, said contracts to provide the residential care are being sought by the Outagamie County Association for Retarded Children and Christian Community Living Systems Inc., which has facilities in Wisconsin.

DeBruin said the adult residential care might be available by June.

Several such homes are now operating in Brown and Winnebago counties, he explained.

Most adults who would be released to the group homes are mentally retarded (have developmental disabilities). The state Division of Mental Hygiene has determined, DeBruin explained, that a mental institution is not the proper place for the mentally retarded person.

Residential group foster care is one of the alternatives to institutionalization.

Each proposed home would accommodate five to eight adults who are ambulatory, have self-care skills and have no continuing medical-nursing care problems.

grounds for a challenge.

Holmes, contacted in Madison today, said that while he hasn't reviewed the Appleton program, "it appeared it could be quite appropriate" for the city to use the method it has for reassessing the city over a three-year period.

That method is to reassess roughly one-third of the city each year. Those areas that are not reassessed are multiplied by 2.7027 to bring them up to 100 per cent full value. Maloney has charged that that gives reassessed properties higher assessments because improvements, inflation and more is taken into account. Some nonassessed areas of the city, on the other hand, have not been reassessed for 30 years, Maloney said, and even multiplying them by 2.7027 would leave their full value assessments lower than the physically assessed property.

Maloney proposed to not implement any of the new assessments until the entire city is reassessed. He also called for a refund to property owners who paid taxes based on assessments higher than they would have been had they been figured by the 2.7027 multiplication and increased taxes for those that were lower.

Schwarzbauer said 353 out of 1,410 properties reassessed in Calumet County in 1973 received assessment reductions. Under Maloney's proposal, they would have to pay more taxes.

Committee members agreed there was no way to avoid all inequities. Geenen said the state assessor's manual allows for up to a 12.5 per cent variation in full-value assessments.

One alderman argued that delaying implementation of reassessments until the full city is covered — a job that Schwarzbauer said should take only three years but which Maloney said could take four or five — would benefit those assessed first because they would not be affected by inflation between the time they were assessed and implemented.

Maloney said he had received 30 calls from people complaining of their new assessments. Other aldermen in wards partially reassessed last year said they had received few calls, and some of them weren't complaints.

Maloney said his constituents expected the 2 per cent tax break that Schwarzbauer had initially proposed, but Geenen had ruled that illegal. The city attorney noted Thursday that even with the 2 per cent break, owners of $40,000 homes would have their taxes lowered only about $20.

"That's not much to complain about," he said.

"I would like to have given these people something for cooperating," Schwarzbauer said, explaining his tax break proposal.

"What's wrong with looking for a different way of making it fair?" asked Maloney.

Geenen said he saw no other alternatives.

department heads are not exposed to "new ideas" from other areas of the country.

Ald. Orville Strutz (17th), not a member of finance, said private businesses often send their executives to out-of-state gatherings "in the hope they can learn something."

Sutherland, however, said businesses are authorizing fewer such trips today. And when they do, he said, it is usually a fringe benefit for employes, a morale booster that serves more as a vacation than a job benefit.

"We can't do that in the public sector," asserted Sutherland.

"Maybe we should do it," retorted Day.

Sutherland, referring to a statement he made when he promulgated his policy in 1972, said in-state sessions helped department heads because they dealt with similar issues governed by the same state laws. Personal contacts with area and state officials could also be pursued at such meetings, he said.

Out-of-state sessions, on the other hand, deal with general topics and — when the higher travel costs are added up — don't give the same returns that in-state sessions do.

Magnette, who wants to attend the three-day, weekend convention of the American Society of Building and Construction Inspector's annual conference in Las Vegas, said he hoped to pick up some new thinking from inspectors and others dealing with problems similar to Appleton's, nationwide.

Sutherland warned the committee that if it wanted to allow more out-of-state sessions, it should do it with a policy change rather than bending the present one. To do that, he said, would "open a can of worms" and create inequities for different department heads wanting to attend different out-of-state sessions.

He said he didn't see how an out-of-state convention policy could be administered fairly.

Aldermen Rayburn Kaufman (4th) and Day voted to pay for Magnette's Las Vegas trip, while Ald. Beverly Wieckert (11th) voted no.

It was a reaffirmation of the committee's previous recommendation, which was referred back to committee by the City Council on Feb. 6.

In other action Thursday, the committee asked Running to study the feasibility of a central purchasing department in the city. Running will check with city department heads and see what is done in other cities before making his report.

East preparing for AFS Week

Appleton High School-East will observe its annual AFS Week, beginning Monday, to raise money for the foreign student program.

Monday's activities will include the selling of Lollo candy bars, named after East's foreign student from South Africa, Lollo Thomas.

Tickets for the East-West faculty basketball game, set for 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at East, will go on sale Monday. There will be a pizza sale, a slave day and the computer mate day on Tuesday. On Wednesday, the students have been asked to dress appropriately for safari day. A number of games are also planned.

Thursday will be jug day, when students will be able to "buy" a song or a dance from a teacher.

Friday will be silent film day, when students will be asked to dress up like characters from the silent film era. A dance will follow the conference basketball game Friday.

Oshkosh man pleads innocent of arson

OSHKOSH — An Oshkosh man pleaded innocent in Circuit Court Thursday to an arson charge in connection with an early October fire at the Mercury Marine Racing Division building, 20 Wisconsin St., Oshkosh.

A trial date will be set later for George S. Rodriguez, 39, 530 N. Main St., according to Judge William E. Crane, a motion by defense attorney George Curtis will first have to be heard.

Cuttis asked the court to dismiss the charges Thursday, claiming the state failed to show probable cause at the preliminary examination that a crime was committed and that the state failed to file an information within the time required by Wisconsin law.

Crane denied the latter charge because, he ruled, the information was filed in time. The first charge, however will be heard at a hearing that will be scheduled later.

Police look for man who tried to enter apartment

Appleton police were continuing their search today for a man who reportedly attempted to force his way into an Appleton family's apartment at gunpoint about 10:30 p.m. Thursday.

Police said the suspect, described as about 23 with short hair, "glazed" eyes and appearing nervous, went to the Daniel Blake residence, 1836 N. Ullman St., and used a key to get in.

He got the lock opened but couldn't get in because a chain lock was secured. When Mrs. Blake went to the door, the man pointed a pistol through the opening at her. He told her he knew what shift her husband was working on and how many children she had.

He told her all he wanted was money, but when she replied that she only had checks, he ordered her to make one out for $300.

When she told him only her husband made out the checks, he instructed her to give him a blank check, which he took. He left without firing any shots or gaining entry into the apartment.

Mrs. Blake told police she believed it was the same man who had come to the apartment three weeks ago. At that time he was dressed in a sailor's uniform and let himself in by use of the key. When he saw Mrs. Blake, he stated, "You're not Darlene! See ya."

However, when he left, he refused to give the key back to Mrs. Blake. The earlier incident was not reported previously to police.

Police said the man was wearing a black ski jacket this time.

Ex-Humane Society officer dies at home

Jessie M. Erlanson, 71, 217 W. Pacific St., longtime Outagamie County Humane Society officer, was found dead at home by a relative just before 10 a.m. today.

Outagamie County Coroner Bernard H. Kemps said Mrs. Erlanson died from congestive heart failure. Funeral services are pending at the Wichmann Funeral Home.

until the end of June after which main bridge griders will be installed during the first two weeks of July.

The concrete superstructure, bridge deck and sides are scheduled for construction in August. Other work schedules call for water main installation and preparation for new bridge approaches to be done during July and August.

Electrical work will be undertaken during August, September and October with the completion of the entire project expected by the end of October.

Roadway of the new span will be 34 feet compared to the existing 20-foot roadway. Angle of the bridge will vary slightly from the existing span designed to improve access to Thilmany Pulp and Paper Co. off the bridge and to permit realignment of the lift portion of the bridge which is scheduled for replacement at a future date.

The esisting bridge is over 50 years old and has been deteriorating rapidly the past few years, often necessitating maintenance work which proves only a temporary solution as problems develop in other areas.

fund, that there were numerous errors in the movement of hospital population records and that Speener had billed the county for $108 in personal, long distance telephone calls.

Schroeder said he was called out of the board meeting before he had a chance to call for the tabled resolution seeking the bathroom funds. He did not identify the person who called him out and showed him the audit report.

He said that, in light of its contents, it did not appear to be the right time to ask for the funds.

Besides, Schroeder said, the Lake Winnebago Council has scheduled a public hearing for March 5 to determine the need for the bathroom project.

Speener has said he is sure the council will approve the expenditure.

The next county board meeting is March 12.

year, and that 20 per cent of this, or $2,000 to $2,500, is lost income.

"Now they're talking about cutting us back another 2 per cent" — the most recent added reduction to Wisconsin's gasoline allocation for February. "And there she goes again," he said. "She's coming right out of the little guy again."

He also criticized the federal directive that stations not make special efforts to take care of regular customers. He noted the fuel oil policy dictated was to not take on new customers but rather take care of existing ones, and "now this new gasoline policy seems to contradict that philosophy."

Some stations are not suffering from a shortage of gasoline. One Skelly station reported that it was receiving 100 per cent of its 1972 allotment while another Fox Cities station reportedly was receiving 110 per cent of the 1972 allotment, although the operator declined to comment on the subject, except to deny the figure.

One association member who was asked to comment about a possible mass closing said that "if it gets to this, I'll go along with it. But now, I'm only existing, so what do I live on if I shut down?"

He also said that unless almost all stations agree to close, it would be unsuccessful, and he doubted that many of the cut-rate stations would close.

A spot check indicated would be considerable resistance to a mass closing, especially by those with adequate supplies and not active in the association. Apparently less than half of the stations in the Fox Cities are actively affiliated with the association.

Piche is suggesting that the shutdown be continued until the demands he cited are met. He said this may be the only way to get the attention of William Simon, head of the federal energy office, and Stanley York, head of the state energy office. Of York, he added that "York doesn't even know there is a service station. All he knows is that there is an oil company and a customer."

Piche assailed the two energy officials and said he and other station operators didn't believe there was a true fuel shortage. He said there is more fuel oil in storage now than a year ago, and that some will have to be saved for next year when it won't be as efficient.

Of gasoline, he said, it is being stored so long now that the additives, which improve mileage and burning performance, wear out before it's used.

Johnson spoke to members of the Brown County association Thursday night. He gave little encouragement for the operators and said 298 stations in Wisconsin have closed during the past year.

Arco is closing in the western part of the state, Exxon is out, Mobil is closing, Gulf is out and Standard is surveying its small stations to determine what action should be taken with them, he said.

He blamed the plight on the "politics in Washington and the tactics of the major oil companies." The gasoline dealers can't survive with the Phase 4 regulations and the pressures of the major oil companies to cut back supplies to independents.

The majors raised gasoline prices 7 per cent while the dealers have been able to raise their prices only 7/10 of 1 per cent, he said.

He said the majors want to control the retail segment and then will hire the best independent operators to run the company stations.

Johnson called for a major letter-writing campaign to congressmen asking support for a senate bill which would establish five-year contracts with renewal rights for dealers and suppliers, keep the major companies out of the retail segment of the industry and equalize tank wagon prices of gasoline.

"Closing will be a last-ditch effort, and the effort will have to come from you," he said.

There are 37 Health Center patients with developmental disabilities, DeBruin said, but it is unlikely that all of them are capable of living outside an institution or similar type of facility.

Some of the retarded patients have been in the institution for up to 30 years. "The patients will have to be closely evaluated to determine if they can adjust outside the Health Center, DeBruin explained.

The retarded persons were placed in institutions years ago because there was no place else for them, he said.

Based on the January bill, it costs $1,043 a month to keep each of the 37 developmentally disabled patients at the Health Center, DeBruin told the unified board.

He expected it will cost about $350 per month to keep a person in a residential group care home.

Federal assistance funds are involved in both present and proposed care, he said.

We Believe A Stereo System Should Sound Better At Home Than It Does On Paper.

If you have $400-500 to put into a stereo system, there are lots of really good receivers and record players to choose from, but very few speakers that hold up their all-important end of the system. Which is why some systems wind up sounding less impressive at home than they did in the advertisement.

We sell The Smaller Advent Loudspeaker because it turns this situation upside down. Not only do a pair of Smaller Advents sound as good as you (and we) had hoped, but well beyond unreasonable expectations. There is just nothing remotely like them.

The Smaller Advents were designed to sound as good in every respect, including frequency bandwidth, as any speakers of any price. Test reports in both High Fidelity and Stereo Review magazines agree that their response and overall performance would be noteworthy in any speaker, regardless of size or cost.

To understand just how much of a difference these speakers make in what you actually can hear for your money, come in and listen to the systems we've built around a pair of them.

DNR hearings on air pollution orders

MENASHA —Eleven firms, including the Menasha Electric and Water Utilities and Neenah-Menasha sewerage commission, have been called to a public hearing to fire progress reports on complying with Department of Natural Resource air pollution abatement orders.

The hearings, set for March 18 in Green Bay, were directed by Thomas Frangos, DNR environmental protection division administrator.

Air pollution abatement orders were issued to the utility on April 16, 1973, and to the sewerage commission on April 9 but that one was amended on Oct. 30.

Gary Kuberski, air pollution engineer at the DNR's Lake Michigan district office in Green Bay, explained that the orders direct that federal clean air standards be met by May, 1975.

The DNR has been designated to handle compliance with the Federal Environmental Protection Agency dictates to put controls or eliminate smokestacks which are pumping more-than-allowed particulate into the air.

Steps have already been taken by the sewerage commission and utility to alleviate the problem.

The commission, in plant expansion plans, intends to discontinue the use of its incinerator, while the utility has just opened bids on a $243,000 electrostatic precipitator to remove fly ash.

But, just this week, the sewerage commission briefly discussed the use of solid waste incineration as a means of generating heat to dry sludge created by the sewage treatment. For $8,000 it could find out if the idea —proposed by Consoer-Townsend Associates — is feasible. The idea has been tabled until the commission can get some preliminary indications from the DNR on whether it would accept such a modification to the expansion plan.

In the utility's case, the bids have been opened and a contract with Universal Oil Company's air correction division has been recommended and approved. However, putting the equipment in service might take longer than the 15 months until the deadline.

The utility, in a letter to the DNR in October, asked for an extension of the deadline, but Kuberski, citing the EPA guidelines, indicated that the original timetable must be kept.

"This is the most important date," Kuberski said, adding that it was "by May of 1975," that the DNR expected full compliance.

He explained that the March 18 hearings, although required by EPA, more than anything else were to check the progress of the firms which are under order and to see that the 1975 date will be met.

State agents arrest two men on cocaine sale charges in Neenah

OSHKOSH — State agents arrested two men in Neenah at about 2:30 a.m. Thursday in connection with a sale of cocaine made in the Fox Point Shopping Center parking lot.

Leon F. Peschong, 23, 1122 E. Singer Circle, Milwaukee, was charged with delivering a controlled substance after he sold four ounces of cocaine to a state agent for $1,300 an ounce.

Gregory B. Gustafson, 22, no address listed, was arrested shortly after Peschong and charged with aiding and abetting the delivery of a controlled substance.

Allegedly, Peschong met a state agent waiting for him in a car at the parking lot and first sold him just one ounce of the cocaine. The state agent paid $1,300 to Peschong who then told the agent to wait while he would go and get three more ounces of the white, powdered drug.

Peschong then reportedly drove to a nearby car where Gustafson was waiting for the money and ready to give Peschong the rest of the cocaine.

After selling the other three ounces to the agent, Peschong was arrested along with Gustafson.

At their initial appearance in county court Thursday afternoon, Judge William H. Carver set their bond at $5,000 each. Both men remain in jail.

The preliminary examinations for both men will take place at 1:30 p.m. next Thursday.

If found guilty, each could receive either a $15,000 fine or five years in jail or both.

Preliminary exminations have been scheduled for two young men arrested in the first week of February on drug trafficking charges in Oshkosh.

Craig Amato, 20, 707 Chicago St., Manitowoc, charged with selling cocaine and Frank V. Burzik Jr., 24, 839 Gruenwald Court, Oshkosh, charged with possession of cocaine with intent to sell, appeared in county court Thursday where the scheduling took place. The two defendants were arrested along with four other men and two women in a Feb. 1-2 drug bust in Oshkosh by state agents.

After Amato and Burzik waived their 10-day time period for a preliminary examination, the examinations were scheduled for 2:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Amato has been released from jail on a property bond of $5,000 and Burzik was released upn cash payment of his $5,000 bond.

Meals on wheels helps the elderly and disabled

By MAUREEN BLANEY
Post-Crescent staff writer

Often the elderly or those living alone or ill are disinterested or incapable of making a nutritious meal for themselves.

However, the Meals on Wheels program makes sure that at least 32 people living in Appleton get one good hearty meal a day, for five days a week.

The program was originated by the King's Daughters Circle but has now branched out to include other volunteers. The group provides much of the cost of the meals which are prepared at the two local hospitals.

A minimal fee of $1.55 a day or $7.75 a week is charged but volunteers in the program work for free.

Over 200 women work in teams of two to deliver hot meals between 11:15 a.m. and 1 p.m. weekdays. Each team delivers eight meals and the long volunteer list makes each volunteer only have to give up about one day a month.

There is no age limit for volunteers but the women average in age from 30 to 65 years.

Besides regular meals, special diet meals are also prepared. Persons wanting to enroll in the meals on wheels program are screened by a visiting nurse for their eligibility.

Persons interested in the program can contact either Mrs. James Zwack or Mrs. Ruth Russler.

Dead raccoon studied for rabies

A raccoon, believed to be the same animal which bit a 16-year-old Appleton girl at the Lawrence University tennis courts last Saturday, was shot and killed about two blocks west of the courts about 7 p.m. Thursday.

The animal was shot by George Theiss, 301 W. Prospect Ave., after he spotted it trying to get into the garbage at the Thomas Oudenhoven residence, 307 W. Prospect Ave.

The girl, Ann Scherzinger, 2330 Woodlark Road, had been bitten several times on both calves after she and a 15-year-old boy were chased by the animal. If the animal had not been caught by this weekend, the girl would have had to take rabies shots.

Police, who had searched the area most of Tuesday night, said they would send the animal's head to Madison for testing.

Driver leaps from car stalled on train tracks

LITTLE CHUTE — William Fitzpatrick, 50, 612 Franklin St., escaped injury when he jumped from his car only seconds before it was hit and demolished by a Chicago and North Western Railway train about 7:55 a.m. Thursday, according to police.

Fitzpatrick was driving north on Depot Street and started to cross the railway tracks when the motor stalled with the car in the middle of the tracks. He saw the train approaching from the east and barely had time to undo his seat belt and jump free of the auto which was thrown 110 feet by the impact. Footboard and hose damage was reported to the engine of the train. Engineer was Earl Bond, 472 Ruggles St., Fond du Lac.
